CPI WITHDRAWS MAC-BLO OFFER

MONTREAL (UPC) — Canadian Pacific Investments Ltd., bowing to opposition from Premier Bill Bennett, today withdrew its takeover bid for MacMillan-Bloedel, Ltd., Canada's largest forest products company.

CPI board chairman Ian D. Sinclair made the announcement following a meeting of the CPI board of directors.

Sinclair expressed "regret" the CPI bid had been turned down by the M-B board of directors as well as drawing fire from Bennett, who vigorously opposed any transfer of control of the Vancouver-based company out of British Columbia.

"The board of directors has decided to meet the request of Premier Bennett concerning its offer for the shares of MacMillan-Bloedel it does not already own," Sinclair said in a prepared statement.

"Accordingly the offer will not be made at this time."

Sinclair noted Bennett's pledge that his province was "not for sale" and would fight any effort by a non-B.C. based group to take over Mac-Blo.

The CPI board, he said, "noted that at present less than 20 per cent of its (Mac-Blo's) shares are registered in the names of British Columbians."

STARVATION DEATHS FEARED

Strike Strangling U.K.

LONDON (Reuter) — Strike-battered Britain has been warned that all food factories could close down next week and there is a danger of old people starving to death.

Prime Minister James Callaghan called in trade union chiefs and appeared close to declaring a state of emergency to handle the mounting industrial crisis.

In a letter to Callaghan, the Food Manufacturers Federation said only 10 per cent of raw materials was reaching its factories because of a truck drivers' strike.

Federation President Derrick Hornby told a news conference that Britain's entire food-manufacturing industry may shut next week, with 600,000 workers laid off.

Hornby, whose federation represents 350 of the country's biggest food manufacturers, said he had not spoken out before for fear of alarming the public.

Old age pensioners, the disabled and people who could not afford to stock up with emergency provisions would suffer most — "I believe old people could easily go hungry and starve," he said.

With supply lines strangled by strike pickets, the cabinet today will "seriously consider" a state of emergency to ensure the continued flow of essential goods, a highly-placed official said.

Callaghan appealed to the trade unions today to save his Labor government from being sunk by anti-union feeling in this year's elections.

Ignoring the advice of union leaders, most of the 100,000 truckers, striking for a 22-per-cent pay rise, have organized so-called "secondary picketing" to block movement of goods from docks and firms not directly involved in the dispute.

In a highly-publicized parliamentary speech Tuesday night, Conservative leader Margaret Thatcher offered to help the government enact laws to curb union power, and her plea was heralded in the media as the most impressive performance of her parliamentary career.

Callaghan instead appealed to truckers to go back to work, but with no sign of an end to a dispute, he has little recourse than to put troops on the trucks.

Meanwhile, railway engineers reaffirmed Wednesday that they will stage a one-day strike today, their second this week.

THE ICEMAN COMETH but not too often in Victoria's relatively balmy West Coast climate, and for several days now the ice covering Colquitz Creek and Portage Inlet has been steadily melting as we finally emerged from an unusually long cold spell. Thousands of youngsters are probably mourning happy hours spent playing on the ice, but for most adult Victorians the disappearance of the frozen white expanse induces a feeling of relief, and it didn't come nearly fast enough. Moonies 'Ready To Die'

NEW YORK (UPI) — New West magazine says followers of the Rev. Sun Myung Moon have been programmed to commit suicide in defiance of opposition to their cult, just as did more than 900 members of the Peoples Temple in Jonestown, Guyana.

The magazine quotes a former member of Moon's Unification Church — followers of which popularly are known as "Moonies" — as saying Moon teaches his followers that death by their own hands is preferable to "deprogramming" or life outside his church.

New West quotes former Moonie Virginia Mabry, 24, as saying she attended a lecture at the Moon House in San Francisco in which anatomy lessons were given instructing where to cut with a razor in the event any member was kidnapped by parents bent on deprogramming.

"The best thing would be to throw ourselves in front of the deprogrammer's car, because then he'd be charged with murder," she told New West. "Second, depending on how much time we had, we were told to slice either our wrist or our jugular vein. The jugular, they said, was quicker."

TORONTO (CP) — Ron Basford is leaving politics and will resign his Vancouver Centre seat effective Feb. 1, according to the CBC which adds that he will join the Vancouver law firm of Davis and Co.

A $20B RETIREMENT FUND?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and his family, now embarked on a vacation that may become permanent exile from Iran, can comfort themselves with a fortune that one source estimates at more than $20 billion, The Washington Post reported today.

In a dispatch from Tehran, the newspaper said the exact size of the monarch's wealth is a closely guarded secret. But the source, identified as an Iranian economist, said the $1 billion figure previously reported was a "gross underestimate" and that the shah's assets probably exceed $20 billion.

The newspaper did not explain how its source arrived at the $20 billion figure. But it quoted various other sources as saying that the royal family's wealth derives from Iranian oil revenues, widespread business investments and even a drug-smuggling operation in which the shah's twin sister, Princess Ashraf, was reported to have been deeply involved.

The newspaper quoted one source, described as having knowledge of Iranian business and the royal family, as saying that "Iranian opium and hashish was leaving the country, and heroin and cocaine was coming in."

The main vehicle for the royal family's business interests is the Pahlavi Foundation, ostensibly a charity but in practice a profitable investment house, The Post said.

The Post said the foundation holdings include banks, hotels, casinos, industrial and mining ventures, agriculture, construction firms and trading companies.

USC Drive Comes Up Bit Short

The Unitarian Service Committee of Canada fund-raising drive in Victoria has come to an end so far as making donations locally is concerned. A final list of donors can be found today on page 14.

The campaign this year fell somewhat short of its goal with the total standing at $32,339, but it was still the second-highest amount ever raised in Victoria and the Victoria Times, on behalf of the USC, wishes to thank those who contributed to aid the thousands of deserving people in impoverished nations who will benefit from these funds.

While the Victoria campaign is officially over, the USC's need is always great and donations mailed to the USC at 56 Sparks St., Ottawa K1P 5B1 will be welcomed. Receipts for income tax purposes will be issued on request.

Iran Still at Flashpoint

Times News Services

TEHRAN — Pro-shah troops clashed with thousands of anti-shah demonstrators in Ahwaz in Iran's southern oilfield district today and heavy casualties were reported on the day following the monarch's departure from the strife-torn country.

First reports said 24 people were killed and at least 100 wounded by gunfire.

There were no immediate details of how the shooting started.

The Tehran newspaper Ettelaat said the army opened fire in Ahwaz after tens of thousands of demonstrators had gathered in front of a mosque. The newspaper said there were hundreds of casualties.

An army spokesman in Tehran said that after morning prayers at the Ahwaz garrison groups of frenzied officers and soldiers ran through the city of 500,000 calling for demonstrations in support of the absent shah.

One serious clash developed when armed soldiers came upon a group of demonstrators trying to topple a statue of the shah in an Ahwaz square.

One Ahwaz resident, reached by telephone from Tehran, said: "There's so much shooting outside that I don't dare go near the windows."

The sudden outburst of military-led violence followed strong rumors that revellers who marched into the streets celebrating what they said was the end of the shah's 38-year rule could face a violent reaction from the military and police.

The capital itself, which was quiet after night-long revelry, showed no immediate signs that the backlash was a co-ordinated effort.

There were strong

Times Appeals Cartoon Case

Victoria Times publisher Colin McCullough said today the newspaper will appeal the B.C. Supreme Court judgment Tuesday awarding damages to Municiapl Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zam in a libel action.

McCullough said the decision was taken after study of the judgment, which he called disappointing, and after conferring with the paper's legal advisers.

Vander Zalm says he is extremely pleased with the decision that awarded him $3,500 damages in his libel suit against the Times and cartoonist Bob Bierman. (See page 20 for Mr. Justice Craig Munroe's judgment).

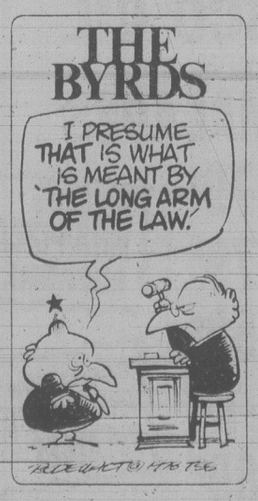

The former human resources minister claimed: "It shows once and for all that the programs I introduced were effective and beneficial, not cruel and inhuman."

Bierman described the judgment as a defeat for all political cartoonists that will force them to tone down their pictorial comments in the future.

Vander Zalm sued the Times, Bierman, former Times publisher Stuart Underhill and editor Barbara McLintock, claiming he was libelled by an editorial cartoon that appeared in the newspaper last year.

The cartoon, which depicted the minister pulling wings off flies, portrayed

199 Bodies Recovered In Earthquake Rubble

TEHRAN (AP) — The death toll in the Iranian earthquake rose to 199 today, rescue officials said, and the Tehran newspaper Ettelaat said the total may eventually top 1,000.

A spokesman for the Red Lion and Sun, Iran's Red Cross, said 199 bodies had been recovered from the rubble in the remote eastern villages of Bazanabad, Khorramabad and Ebrahimabad.

He said about 1,000 homes and other buildings were destroyed, that the villages had a combined population of 1,800, and that troops expected to dig out more bodies.

The spokesman said emergency supplies of food, clothing and tents have been sent from Mashad to the village of Quae'n, in the centre of the quake area about 800 kilometres southeast of Tehran and 160 kilometres west of the border with Afghanistan.

Three C-130 transport planes were to fly from Tehran to Quae'n with 300 tents, 1,000 blankets, 300 lamps and 300 heaters, the spokesman said, and three doctors and five nurses were sent from a military garrison.

It was the second killer quake in eastern Iran in four months and was preceded by several non-fatal shocks in the last month.

Ottawa Quashes Papers

QUEBEC (CP) — The federal government has refused to hand over state papers relating to Ottawa's actions during the 1970 October Crisis to a Quebec justice department investigator.

The decision was confirmed recently by a letter from Louis-Philippe Landry, federal assistant deputy minister of justice, to special Crown prosecutor Jean-Francois Duchaine, who has been working on a report on the crisis for the provincial justice department.

Last year, Duchaine requested a series of documents from the RCMP and a number of federal departments, noting that they were necessary to complete his investigation.

But in the letter, Landry replied that Ottawa was only willing to supply information on the kidnapping of former British diplomat James Cross, which touched off the crisis.

Duchaine filed a 1,400-page report on the October Crisis to Quebec Justice Minister Marc-Andre Bedard.

Wooing of Quebec 'Harmful to Canada'

OTTAWA (CP)— Many Canadians believe politicians are harming national unity by trying to woo Quebecers with the economic advantages of remaining in Confederation, a study released Tuesday by the Council for Canadian Unity says.

The council, which organizes Canada Week activities annually, reached this conclusion after interviewing what it describes as 500 opinion leaders across a country characterized by inter-provincial jealousies, timid nationalism and no national goals.

Since the November, 1976, election of the Parti Quebecois, the federal government has published a series of studies showing the economic disadvantages facing Quebecers living in an independent country. The Quebec government has countered with studies showing the opposite results.

Marie-Josee Drouin, an economist who supervised the study, found "it was like trying to pull teeth" to get most Canadians to discuss their views on national unity.

The study found that most Canadians, even in Quebec, are more pre-occupied with their regional economic problems and are willing to become richer at the expense of other provinces.

"The net effect of this is that they want a bigger piece of a pie that has ceased growing, regardless of whose share will be diminished by what they gain."

While most Canadians had different perceptions of the causes of national tensions, the residents of nine provinces ganged up to condemn Ontario for treating the rest of the country as second class.

"We are branch plants of Ontario; we've been on the periphery of power too long . . . we are tired of subsidizing Ontario's manufacturing industry."

The report says attitudes towards Ontario "were pervasively fierce," and general crabbiness dominated relations between regions and provinces.

All provinces except British Columbia viewed the Atlantic provinces as the worst treated in Confederation. British Columbia considered itself the hardest done by.

On language issues, the study found Canadians to be often ill-informed and ready to exaggerate problems.

In English-speaking Canada, many would complain about what they believed to be high costs in producing bilingual cereal boxes and Quebecers often cited an incident in Toronto at which baseball fans booed when the national anthem was sung in French.

Refugees Rock the Boat

Times News Services

HONG KONG — Three hundred young refugees tried to force the skipper of their packed freighter to sail into Hong Kong waters today by storming the engine room and rocking the ship from side to side for three hours.

They failed, and the Hong Kong government demanded that the ship sail its 3,000 passengers to Taiwan immediately.

The ship, the 2,290-ton Huey Fong, has been anchored in international waters off Hong Kong for more than three weeks. The government of the crowded British colony refuses to let the refugees land, and the captain refuses to sail because the Nationalist government on Taiwan won't accept them either.

A spokesman for the refugees, Chu Hsien-ming, said the youths had become desperate and tried to rock the Huey Fong "by running from one side to the other" while other refugees tried to keep it on an even keel. "This lasted for three hours and finally we calmed them down," he said.

Meanwhile, a Malaysian government official said today at least a half-million refugees are expected to leave Vietnam in the next few months.

Malaysia, which has more than 53,000 Vietnamese refugees in temporary camps in its coastal areas, gave notice Monday that it will not allow any more "boat people" to land.

Commenting in Ottawa, Immigration Minister Bud Cullen said the United Nations must set out a global refugee policy so all nations can make a concerted effort to alleviate the worsening refugee problem.

"It would be easier and simpler to have a global figure so countries would know how many refugees they would have to take ... and then they would have to measure up," Cullen said in a speech to a service club Tuesday.

"If there was ever a time when the United Nations should come to the fore and play a leadership role in a problem which has reached almost crisis proportions — this is the time.

He also criticized those countries that refuse to admit their share of refugees but praised the United States, Sweden and France for their policies and Canada's record in accepting Indochinese refugees.

Injured Shopper Wins

VANCOUVER (CP) — An 89-year-old Coquitlam woman has been awarded $12,800 in damages by the British Columbia Supreme Court for injuries she suffered in December, 1975, when a supermarket's automatic door malfunctioned and knocked her off her feet.

Mr. Justice A. A. Mackoff said testimony indicated Super-Valu Stores Ltd., knew the automatic doors malfunctioned intermittently, but was waiting for a complete breakdown before repairing them.

Court was told Louella Ina Morris suffered a shoulder injury that left her unable to do housework and knit.

'SUBVERSIVES' IDENTIFIED

MONTREAL (CP) — The Gazette says a secret weekly publication produced by the federal solicitor-general's department identifies people and groups considered subversive.

In an Ottawa story, the newspaper says the publication, called The Whizzer, is distributed to a small group of senior security officials and deputy ministers in several departments.

It labels people and groups, including diplomats, believed to be involved in intelligence activities on grounds that would never stand up in court, The Gazette says.

Its judgements and allegations will likely never be tested in court and most of the labelled groups don't know the document exists, the Gazette says.

Robin Bourne, head of the branch that prepares the report, is quoted as saying: "We have no compunctions about mentioning the names of foreign agents, but we don't mention the names of Canadians whose names have not been mentioned in public documents."

Builder Abducted

Copters Collide: 4 Die

OPA-LOCKA, Fla. (AP) — Two helicopters collided over a busy suburban Miami airport today, strewing the field with bodies and debris, officials said. Police said at least four people were killed and there were no known survivors.

"There's all dead people out there," said a dispatcher for Randle-Eastern ambulance. "They're lying on the field like rag dolls."

The dispatcher said eight body bags were requested, but he did not know how many people were dead.

Four people were aboard one of the crafts, a U.S. Coast Guard helicopter, according to spokesman Dan Dewell. It was not immediately known how many people were aboard the other aircraft, which belonged to Burnside-Ott, a local flying school.

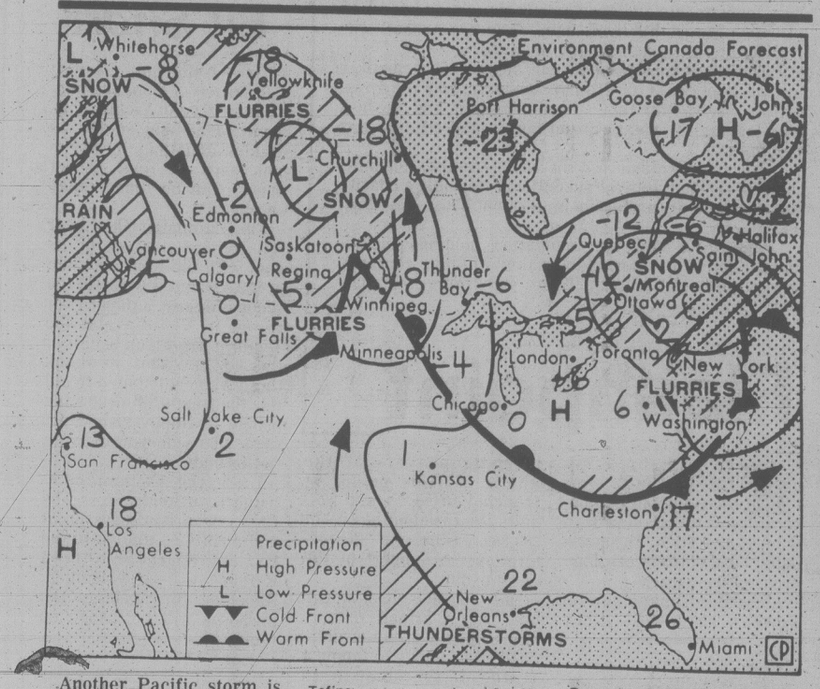

Harold Wood, a supervisor at the general aviation airport here, said the accident occurred at about 10:30 a.m.

Topless Bathing Showdown

BERN (AP) — Swiss foes of topless bathing said Tuesday they have succeeded in forcing a showdown at the polls on the issue. Organizers said they collected more than 12,000 signatures backing a draft ban on "bare bosoms in publicly accessible" places in Bern.

Under the Swiss constitution, the petition obliges officials to put the question to a referendum.

U.S. Suspect Link To B.C. Murders?

Times News Services

A man being held in Bellingham following the deaths of two Western Washington University co-eds is remembered by residents of a Los Angeles area where two Hillside Strangler victims were last seen alive.

Kenneth Bianchi, 27, is to be interviewed by Los Angeles police and also by RCMP, who want to question him about a number of unsolved murders of young women in B.C.

RCMP decided to enter the investigation after evidence found in Bianchi's car indicated he had spent some time in B.C.

Bianchi who used to live in Southern California, is being held on $150,000 bail, charged with second-degree possession of stolen property.

The 13 Hillside Strangler murders occurred between September, 1977 and February, 1978.

On Tuesday, two women living in the Glendale apartment complex in Los Angeles previously occupied by one strangler victim, identified Bianchi as their former neighbor when shown a picture of him taken recently in Bellingham.

"Yeah, that's him," said one woman, who refused to be identified. She said she had lived across from Bianchi.

"He seemed to have a lot of friends," she said. "I saw a lot of girls coming by. Many of them were very young."

"He lived here till April or May. He was very nice, very friendly."

The other neighbor, who also wouldn't give her name, said, "That's Kenny. He lived three doors down. He was a very friendly boy, and we'd talk when he'd stop by on his way home from work."

The Glendale apartment complex is where Kristina Weckler, a 20-year-old college student, lived before becoming the seventh Hillside Strangler victim.

Directly across the street is the residence of the strangler's last victim, 20-year-old Cindy Hudspeth, whose body was found last February in the trunk of her car, abandoned in the mountains above suburban La Canada.

Cambodian Puzzle As Fighting Rages

BANGKOK (UPI) — Vietnamese-led forces have launched a classic amphibious assault behind a heavy naval barrage to seize a strategic island as the focus of the battle shifted to the southern coast of Cambodia, Thai military sources said today.

Fighting was also reported around the country's only deepwater port of Kompong Som but Western intelligence analysts could not say for sure who was holding it.

Among the victims of the Vietnamese naval assault on Kong Island, 20 miles south of the Thai border, which began Tuesday, were 12 Thai fishing boats sunk by Vietnamese warships and helicopter gunships, Thai navy sources said. Several Thai sailors were listed as missing.

The boats were among more than 100 craft ttat gathered to watch the spectacular assault on the island as Vietnamese and Cambodian rebel troops swarmed ashore from 10 landing craft while a small armada of eight frigates, missile boats and gunboats pounded Khmer Rouge positions on shore.

The sources said the invasion force succeeded in capturing much of the 12-mile-long island which controls access to the coastal Cardamommes mountains where the forces of the ousted Pol Pot regime are believed trying to establish a headquarters for a guerrilla war.

Western intelligence sources said there was heavy fighting and Vietnamese air strikes around Kompong Som but could not say who was holding the port city.

All sources agreed Vietnamese warplanes, some of them operating from Pochentong airport in the capital of Phnom Penh, are delivering some of the heaviest airstrikes at Khmer Rouge positions around Kompong Som.

DEATH THREAT ON SIHANOUK?

MOSCOW (Reuter) — An official Soviet newspaper said today Prince Norodom Sihanouk had been forced to represent the interests of the Peking-backed Cambodian government because the Chinese were threatening to kill his family.

Reporting on Prince Sihanouk's trip to New York to speak at the United Nations, Literaturnaya Gazeta said the former Cambodian leader had admitted to U.S. reporters that he was a hostage of the Chinese.

The Chinese and the overthrown Phnom Penh government of Premier Pol Pot were holding Prince Sihanouk's family and "threatening reprisals for the slightest disobediance," the weekly said.

It quoted Prince Sihanouk as saying he had been forced to speak in the name of the Pol Pot regime which had kept him in detention for three years.

Canadians 'Worst Speed Offenders'

OLYMPIA (AP) — Canadians are among the worst abusers of Washington's 55 mile-an-hour speed limit, the state Highway Patrol said Tuesday.

During the first nine days of an enforcement effort between Seattle and Mount Vernon, the patrol said it stopped more than 1,531 vehicles and issued 706 speeding citations and 813 warning tickets.

Captain Stuart Reynolds said in a news release that almost half of those stopped were driving Canadian-licenced cars.

"We know that resident drivers exceed the speed limit in large numbers," said Reynolds, "but not to the degree and frequency of our visitors from Canada."

More Snow Heading For Hard-Hit Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) — As the midwestern United States continued to dig out Tuesday after a blizzard which left at least 56 persons dead, forecasters warned another storm was headed for northern Illinois.

The National Weather Service said up to 10 centimetres more snow was expected in the northern part of the already hard-hit state, parts of which have been declared a disaster area by Gov. James Thompson.

In Chicago, where a record 74 centimetres of snow covered some areas, authorities reported at least 17 storm-related deaths. The weekend storm was the worst in the city since 1967.

In Missouri, Gov. Joseph Teasdale declared 37 counties disaster areas Tuesday.

Teasdale's order called for state agencies to lend equipment and manpower to local snow removal efforts.

Gov. Otis Bowin of Indiana declared four northern Indiana counties a disaster area because of blizzard conditions. Lake, Porter, LaPorte and St. Joseph counties received about 36 centimetres of snow in the weekend blizzard which swept through the upper midwest.

HIJACKERS CLAIM SPIRITUAL MOTIVE

BEIRUT (Reuter) — A seven-hour hijack drama ended early today when devout Moslems, demanding the return of their spiritual leader, released 73 passengers and nine crew members from a Lebanese airliner they seized Tuesday night and gave themselves up.

The six hijackers commandeered the Middle East Airlines Boeing 720 to press demands for the return of the Imam Moussa al-Sadr, spiritual leader of Lebanon's Shiite Moslem community.

The imam disappeared under mysterious circumstances last August after flying to Libya. He has not been heard of since, but the hijackers, who surrendered to Lebanese security forces, say he is in prison in Libya.

The hijackers initially they forced the pilot to change course to Cyprus. But the authorities there refused to allow the plane to land.

The aircraft then returned to Beirut and for the next six hours the hijackers negotiated with Lebanese political and religious leaders over their two demands: the return of the imam and permission to hold a news conference.

No Time for Ironies

The ironies in the fall of Cambodia to Vietnamese invaders last week have been commented upon copiously in the world press, some analysts and opinion-makers seeming to gloat at this struggle between former fraternal brothers in communism and client states of the world's two major Marxist powers, China and the USSR.

Some see no evil in any struggle between the opposing camps of socialism, however far removed from the principals, and American commentators have been particularly smug in this regard. In their nearsighted eagerness to root out rifts in the communist world, they ignore the United States' own considerable responsibility for what has happened in southeast Asia in the last decade. The Americans may have fled mainland Asia in disarray almost four years ago, but the effects of the failure of their massive military intervention are still being felt.

The U.S. stepped in to preserve the so-called democratic government of South Vietnam, but could not succeed against the well-entrenched guerilla forces of the Viet Cong and North Vietnam and was forced to retreat. Far from stabilizing the governments of southeast Asia, that intervention created strong destabilizing forces which ultimately toppled administrations in several countries.

The U.S. decision to send in several hundred thousand troops of its own raised the stakes several-fold from a small-scale civil war between Vietnamese, a hold-over from the days of colonialism, to a wider-based conflict that commanded the rest of the world to choose up sides. Cambodia, bordering on Vietnam and struggling to preserve its neutrality though providing unwilling sanctuary for Vietnamese guerillas, was one of the casualties as the Vietnam war dragged in the bystanders.

It was a sad twist of history to see Prince Norodom Sihanouk, forced to bend this way and that way during the more than 30 years of Japanese wartime occupation, French colonial rule, a period of precarious independence and several years of civil war, asking the United Nations to condemn the Vietnamese, the most recent invaders of a once-peaceful and quiet country that counted for little in the international order of things.

Sihanouk defended the ousted Khmer Rouge government, which according to many independent accounts has a horrible record of atrocities on its hands in the brief three years it ruled Cambodia. One million, as many as two million Cambodians, perhaps, (from a total population of less than nine million) died in forced relocation from the cities to the countryside. The evidence from refugees and a few eyewitnesses was too overwhelming to ignore. In a world that has grown inured to brutality, the Khmer Rouge's actions shocked and horrified.

Can such a regime expect any right of legitimacy in the international forum of the UN?

Can anything be worse than living under such a callous and brutal government? In its last weeks, it could not even prevent the killing inside a heavily-guarded compound in the capital of Phnom Penh of a member of a blue-ribbon panel of foreign journalists and academics invited to tour the new Cambodia.

The Khmer Rouge's promise to recapture Cambodia with a repeat of the four-year guerilla war that brought it to power in 1975 sounds hollow and unconvincing in the face of such demonstrated powerlessness and unpopularity among the people.

And what of them? Will the death and destruction never end? Will the Cambodians now be allowed to desert centre stage in this small flashpoint of the struggle between ideologies and nationalities? The years of war in southeast Asia have produced more than their share of tragedies, but few so poignant as the Cambodians'.

". . . Harold, have you got about $30? All their batteries have gone dead . . . they need 17 C batteries, 11 D batteries, eight of those little penlight ones and two of the nine-volt ones. Would you run down to the store . . . please? . . ."

Tories Coming to the Light

OTTAWA — Blinking like moles brought suddenly to the light and with hostesses watching nervously in case they swipe the silver, Conservative MPs are popping up in the unlikeliest places — at cocktail parties in Rockcliffe, where diplomats, civil service mandarins and cabinet ministers nest at the end of curved, treed driveways.

Some Conservatives always have been fashionable, Red Tories like Flora MacDonald, John Fraser, David MacDonald, and now David Crombie. (Question: Why are all Red Tories Scots?) These days, though, Tory Tories are getting asked out, Tories whose names end in "ski" and who, when they say "oil" means the stuff in the ground, not the stuff that hangs on the wall.

Abrupt Shrinkage

Ottawa has begun to prepare for a changing of the guard, even before certain formalities have been completed, like an election and a chat between the winner and the, then, governor-general Ed Schreyer.

If this strikes you as disloyal, remember that Ottawa is not Moose Jaw or Mississauga, splendid places though these are. Ottawa is the government. And the government is Ottawa. No government, no Ottawa. No Ottawa, no . . . well perhaps not quite, but almost.

It goes without saying that official Ottawa won't publicly cheer the new king until the old king is dead. Polls can change. And have just done. Actually, more interesting than Gallup's abrupt shrinking of Joe Clark's lead from 10 to two percentage points — bumps like this are bound to occur — is that 53 per cent of Conservative voters are attached to no party, compared to only 40 per cent of Liberals. Clark's vote thus is "softer" than is Trudeau's.

Still, if you know where to look in Ottawa — in the shadow of the paper shredder, usually — you can spot signs of change.

Diplomats. At a recent discreet dinner party at one important embassy (not, to head off a diplomatic incident, the U.S.), spotted around the table, beneath the chandelier and above the gleaming shoulders of the ladies, were the contented countenances of one Tory MP and one Tory backroom type — and not one Liberal.

Mailmen. Ottawa letter carriers now stagger from snow bank to snow bank beneath the weight of all the confidential documents being "brown enveloped" to Tory MPs. Jean Piggott got one that showed that the government's housing policy was fouled up. Perrin Beatty got one that showed that the government's manpower training policy was fouled up, or, more accurately, was nonexistent.

Reporters. We function as advance scouts for official Ottawa. Catapulted prematurely by the now out-of-date Gallup poll Tory lead of 10 percentage points, a scoop of 14 reporters are tumbling around the world with Clark, trying at $4,000 each to find things to report. Stay-at-home reporters are busy collecting the home phone numbers of Clark's aides, all of whom — material for a sociology PhD thesis here — have short names: Howe, Green, White, Greg, Ralfe, Doyle, Neville, Murray.

Civil servants. Clark keeps saying the right things, like "Canada has one of the finest civil services in the world." But does he mean it? What about Clark's pledge to gouge 60,000 from civil service ranks by "attrition," which everyone knows won't work since it is mostly stenos who "attrit?"

If the guard changes, some Liberal mandarins will go with it — clerk of the privy council Michael Pitfield, undersecretary of state Pierre Juneau, urban affairs undersecretary Bill Teron. Another couple of dozen assistant deputy ministers, or higher, are linked to the Liberals, as old friends or as ex-ministerial aides, and will have to demonstrate they can discard obsolete loyalties. In case they fail the test, Clark plans to have all deputy ministers sign letters of resignation he can use if he needs to.

Wilds of Alberta

Lobbyists. Most of the busiest around town once worked for the Liberals (ex-Trudeau aides Torrance Wiley and Tom d'Aquinox; ex-ministerial aides Bill Loe and David MacNaughton). If the Outs becomes the Ins, those with an in will be those, like Duncan Edmonds, who did a stint with Clark and who, even better, lives across the street from him in Rockcliffe.

The Tories have been the outs for so long, that no one really knows who they are, or where they come from. I'm told that the other day at external affairs, an aide to an assistant associate undersecretary pulled out a map of the world to help his boss locate Alberta. "By God, sir," said the aide, "it's the same color as us."

That story may be apocryphal. Not apocryphal is that external affairs, after a decade of sending three or four officers a year to universities for a stint as a sort of "diplomat-in-residence," will this year send its first diplomat to the wilds of the University of Alberta. No marks for guessing that this is Clark's alma mater.

Burning His Bridges

It is no surprise that B.C. Liberal leader Gordon Gibson has resigned officially as an MLA to take a job with the federal wing of the party in Ottawa. Gibson announced last fall that he would not run again provincially and that he was considering seeking a federal seat. The provincial Liberals had already set the date for a leadership convention.

Despite that, Gibson's resignation is a real loss to the B.C. political scene. In his four years in the B.C. legislature, Gibson displayed a talent rare in the House. He strove constantly to be the voice of moderation and reason, and seldom became embroiled in the low-level gutter battles that characterize too much of what passes for debate in B.C. politics. His research was thorough, his wit sharp, and his conduct gentlemanly.

For all that, he grew ever more frustrated in the B.C. legislature. The rewards of political success and the all-important votes seemed always to go to those who emphasized confrontation, extremism and rhetoric.

He believes he will fare better in Ottawa, that the federal system has more room for people with his view of what politics should be. Well, perhaps.

However, it appears only too likely that this move of Gibson's is the first step on the road to his eventual withdrawal from politics altogether. He has now stated firmly that the current job in Ottawa is a temporary one only, that he plans to run federally in a North Shore riding whenever the federal election is called.

To run as a federal Liberal in B.C. in 1979 seems tantamount to joining the crew of the Titanic several hours after it struck the iceberg. It is not impossible that Gibson could campaign on his personal reputation and win election to the House of Commons, but it is not very likely. It will be even less likely after Gibson has worked for three or four months as a close aide to the irrationally-hated Prime Minister Trudeau.

If Gibson were to lose his bid for a federal seat and if the Liberals were to lose the entire election, which also seems probable, there would be nowhere for Gibson to go in politics. He is, to a large degree, burning his bridges behind him.

If the bridges in front of him also collapse, it will be an unfortunate loss for all the province.

Boys' Brigade

The Boys' Brigade in Canada is celebrating its 90th year of working with boys in many churches across Canada. Over these years, many boys have been involved in the program conducted in their local church.

Former members, referred to as old boys have entered many walks of life and have moved to many parts of our country. There are also many old boys now living in Canada who were members in some of the 63 other countries around the world where Boys' Brigade companies are operating.

In this special year, we are therefore trying to locate as many of these old boys as possible and enter into communication with them. We also would like to get many of them together if possible.

We ask your readers to write to us at Brigade Headquarters, 115 St. Andrew's Road, Scarborough, Ontario. M1P 4N2. — C.D. Reesor, Executive Director, the Boys' Brigade in Canada.

Can't Ignore World

I am amazed at some letters in your paper, like that of May Ethel Birch in Jan. 3 issue (Wrong Track), saying charity begins at home. True but it does not and must not end there. People who say that sound as if they are Victorians first and human beings last. We wonder how anyone can be so narrowminded.

Regarding charity at home, the United Way collected close to a million dollars, the Colonist 500 fund collected $62,000. Besides, the government sees that no one is without food, clothing or shelter and has access to education, medical and legal aid, etc. We must do more for needy people here at home, but we must not forget the poor, the sick, the blind brethren of our global village who are often victims of unjust social and economic order in the world and are facing the grim spectres of hunger, starvation and disease in their daily existence. True love and compassion know no regional or national boundaries.

Here $25 may buy a few toys for a child but in developing countries it can provide the priceless gift of sight (through Operation Eyesight, Box 565, Victoria, B.C.).

By the way, the Unitarian Service Committee (USC) also has many family planning projects in various countries. May Ethel Birch, may I suggest to you and your friends, you have mentioned in your letter, instead of just talking about birth control, you can and should send donations to USC (56 Sparks Street, Ottawa) earmarked "for family planning projects only" — as we do. — Ms. Hansi Bish, 20-72 Dallas Road.

Two Brave Men

The night of Saturday, Jan. 13 I witnessed the bravest action by Const. Murray Kilshaw and Mr. Lyle Barr.

A car containing five youths smashed head on into a large cedar tree on Claremont Avenue, driving the front end into the front seat.

The car was fully ablaze and Const. Kilshaw and Mr. Barr were struggling to get the door open on the passenger side. The heat was intense and could be felt on the other side of the road. At this time they had no other assistance but managed to get the door open and pulled out a screaming, moaning youth.

At this time firemen, ambulances and more police arrived and the quick action of all parties are to be commended, but the action of Kilshaw and his companion, putting their lives on the line with a fire which could have exploded the gas tank at any moment, was beyond the call of duty and deserves public recognition. — Charles J. Ball, 713 Claremont Avenue.

Canadiana

I feel it would be of great benefit to our province to have our leading newspaper carry a column of Canadiana.

This column would bind together our small outlying, fascinating, colorful communitites by publishing details of their country fairs, bazaars, concerts, dances and auctions in your big city newspaper. Bring big city and tourist money to the little towns.

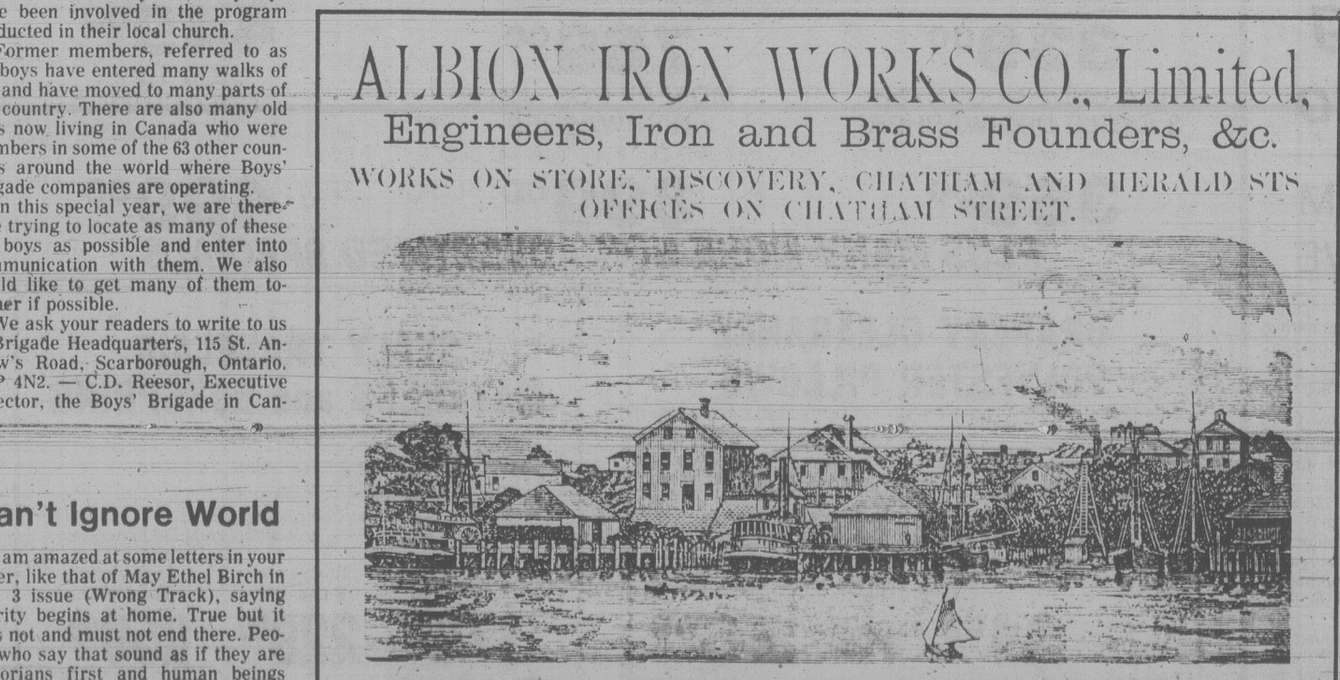

Present a column full of what to do and where to go this weekend for the big city resident that has no idea at all about the life of his country cousin, who would love to get away from the hectic pace on weekends but doesn't care to drive aimlessly down country roads that may not lead anywhere. Your column should carry a small map and detailed instructions on exactly how to get there, how long a drive, and colorful stops on the way.

Help our citizens know one another, draw us together, make our lives richer together.

Replace boredom with an exciting outlook for each weekend.

Free advertising for all our small communities too poor to advertise their own colorful events, and create a point of fascinating interest to our bored big city resident.

In addition, this column would do wonders to your circulation sales, both in your city and in outlying areas. — Barbara J. Stevens, 3967 Bear Street.

Thomas Bamford

An exhibition of paintings and a research project relating to Thomas Bamford (1861-1941) will be undertaken by the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria from Feb. 28 to April 15. Born in Liverpool, Bamford came to Victoria circa 1882, while here he worked for Albion Iron Works designing ornamental embellishments for naval architecture, and for the B.C. surveyor-general. As a painter in oils and watercolors he executed many documentary landscapes while travelling extensively through British Columbia. He was, for a time, president of the Island Arts and Crafts Society.

I would like to ask any readers of the Times who own works by this artist or have documents or recollections of him, to please contact me at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, 1040 Moss Street, (384-4101). Help us fill in an unwritten chaper of the art history of British Columbia. — Robert Amos, Assistant to the Director, Art Gallery of Greater Victoria.

Revolt Against Bureaucrats May Spell End Of Democracy

By NORMAN MACRAE
The Economist

Across the English-speaking world, the system of government is breaking down. In the lucky countries (the United States? Australia?), government is due to decline in importance, so the breakdown should not matter. But it may be easier to avoid some pain everywhere if people begin to understand what is happening.

There are two ways in which a free man can choose his government. The most sensible and direct way is by voting with his feet. The individual can go to live in an area where the government — which can in future be a very local government — permits the lifestyle, rules and customs that he likes. In the 21st century this will become the most usual method of choosing a free man's government, because of the growth of (a) telecommunications (which will make it unnecessary for a brainworker to live near his workplace) and of (b) commonsense.

'Consumer Freedom'

The second and dying way of choosing governments is by voting through the ballot box: by pretending that one can affect one's lifestyle through intimating which of two candidates for president or mayor is on some first Tuesday in November putting on the tribal or party demonstration that temporarily annoys one least. As is usual during the decay of a system which worthy institutions and pious men have not quite finished building up, it is unrespectable to point out that democracy is dying and is going to be replaced by something better, called consumer's freedom.

Through all the period shaping our generation's subconscious, the advance to voting democracy has been regarded as trailing clouds of political morality, as unassailable by decent men as were chivalry, Christendom, feudal obligations, the holy inquisition, the divine right of kings and the British Empire during the periods when quite appalling things were being done in their name. But, since man has been through the change in the assumed absolute moral imperitive of each successive governing system so often before, it could have been hoped that the change this time would be debated with a certain sense of humor.

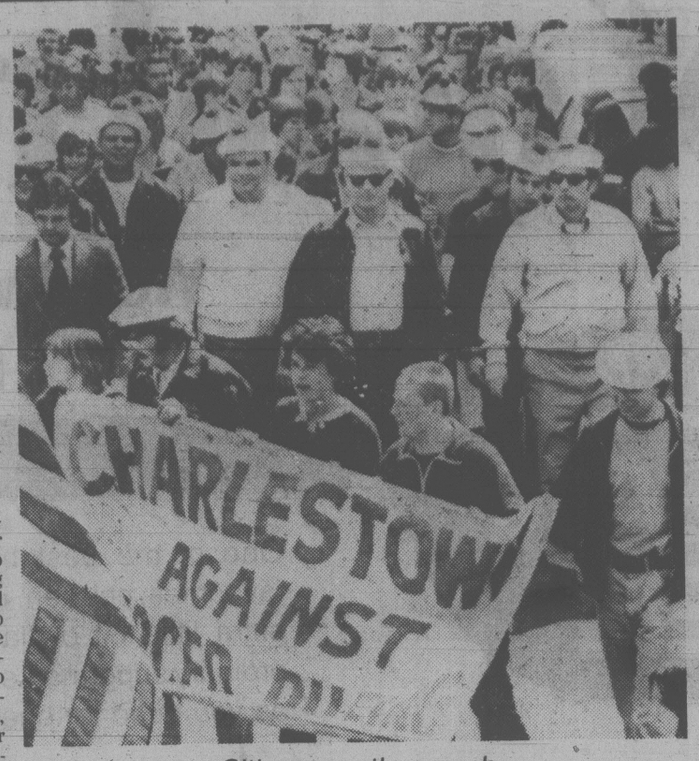

This is not going to happen, because the usual pathologies have been bred on the way. There is probably going to be a great deal of unpleasantness as the next stage unfolds. In the past decade it has become clear that voting democracy cannot work.

The advance to voting democracy was advertised as bringing to culmination the process by which power has passed from kings to nobles to capitalists to, finally, us the voting people. Instead, power has passed even in the English-speaking world to what Solzhenytsin has called the "political bureaucrats" and the "official bureaucrats". These two groups now spend a higher proportion of gnp than did the priests, kings, nobles and capitalists during their own peak periods of power. Awkwardly, they are spending it with a smaller sense of noblesse oblige than did the old power groups in their tamed later years. Read the Watergate tapes if you do not understand this.

This is not mainly because the Nixons, Haldemans, saved-again Southern Baptists, Oxbridge civil servants, town clerks, general secretaries of monopoly trade unions — and other political or official bureaucrats whom we elect, appoint of get stuck with — are less or more virtuous men than were the originally saintly medieval bishops, crusading kings, nobles created out of chivalry or pious Andrew Carnegies who had too much power over our fathers before us. It is because all morality eventually becomes defined as being directed towards the survival of the agent's own group. The reason why we must never allow particular groups to have too much spending power in their hands is that they are certain eventually to have a main and loyal objective of keeping their own bureaucracies growing, because each decision-taker within the system finds that feeding the machine will give him personally a quieter life.

Spending Powers

During these 1970s it has therefore unsurprisingly become clear that public-sector imperialism is not going to be curbed by electing politicians who promise to curb it. Ronald Reagan, the archbishop of such promises, was a two-term governor of California; his governorship left California in desperate need of Proposition 13 — and (as Irving Kristol has said) he would not really have diminished public-sector imperialism if he had been a two-term president of the United States. In the same way it was always absurd to elect Jimmy Carter to run against Washington from inside Washington. "They" cannot be elected to curb "them". Public-sector imperialism in democratic countries is not going to be rolled back by electing some monk to dissolve his own monasteries, nor (don't let's become too dramatic) by the 1789 or 1917 types of bloody revolution. But over the next few decades it is now probably going to be rolled back by a worldwide series of broad but changing equivalents of California's Proposition 13.

Citizens on the march

These reforms will roll slowest, or cause the greatest internal ructions, in the countries where the rot from the era of public-sector imperialism has spread farthest. Like Britain where 30 per cent of workers now have jobs in the public sector — and, more significantly, nearly 50 per cent of trade-unionized workers do. Awkwardly, it is going to be desirable progressively to eliminate most present jobs in the public sector. This stems from the next embarrassing development during the past decade and a bit.

The concentration of spending power in the hands of bureaucrats had been sanctified on the supposition that there are lots of services that can more efficiently be produced by state monopoly than by the market. In the past few years it has become probable that none of these now exists. Even in the 18th century's "traditional four" public services (of justice, police, arms and some modicum of public administration), rich countries' productivity per man has sometimes declined during the past two-and-a-half decades by over 90 per cent, while productivity per man in most free-market industries has more than doubled.

This has happened while technological progress (new psychiatric insights for justice, the information-processing revolutions for the police and public administrators, the extraordinary increase in killing power per dollar spent) should have made it especially easy for advanced countries to have enjoyed more effective crime prevention, cheaper public administration and simpler national defence. But there really is no way of saying that crime rates have anywhere done anything but soar in response to the employment of more police, to longer hours in court, to new prison regimes; that the doubling of local government administrative staff has anywhere led to greater expedition in the handling of citizen's business, instead of typically taking much longer; that gunboat diplomacy was made more terribly swift and sure as the highest technology country in the world spent today's equivalent of $500 billion on losing a war to North Vietnam.

The breakdown of public-sector productivity has not come about because less efficient or less educated people are coming into public service jobs. One of the troubles is precisely that a "new class" of more educated, energetic, articulate and ambitious people have come into them — but are working in an environment where cost-effective methods of production cannot now be achieved.

The main reason why bureaucratic production of any service or goods can no longer work is that the decision-taker in any efficient productive system must now restlessly ask: "What is the best quickly-changing and labor-saving technology that I should use to accomplish this task?" In a state bureaucracy, decision-taking power falls into the hands of people who can explain most sauvely that anybody who keeps asking these questions is being a bad colleague by constantly rocking the boat. In some big business corporations, with layer of management sitting upon layer, decision-blocking power has fallen into the hands of similar middle bureaucracies. These go slowly bust or their managements are more quickly taken over by more innovative concerns. But state bureaucracies are not allowed to be improved by death, and therefore carry on expanding even when their productivity per man has absurdly disappeared.

In the 21st century it is at last going to be seen that it is logical to let the size of each local government unit be set flexibly by what local people at each changing moment want, and to let them choose as customers, not as voting democrats, between as many variants of competitively-tendered services as possible.

In the private sector, a housewife buying food is given the choice: how much food do you want, knowing that this is what you will have to pay if you choose that food from that supermarket? Human beings will not be free until they are allowed, in the smallest possible groups, to answer the question: how much government do you want, having been told that this is what you will have to pay if you are going to choose government of such and such a quantity and quality (with the quality preferably defined in terms of performance contracts — ie., reduced payments to entrepreneurs working on public-service contracts unless by objective tests public administration reaches a certain standard of performance)? There is a conspiracy to pretend that human beings cannot have this choice in governments, but for a large number of public services in the data-processing age they soon can if they want to.

Adversary Games

For some time, it has been easy to foresee that government by alternate halves of the 3 per cent or so of the people who are interested in excitable adversary-game politics, plus by all of the 30 per cent or so of workers who find their way on to taxpayer-financed payrolls, would become government too much in favor of greater importance for themselves. But most of us thought that the eventual bitter reaction against this would flood in unfairly against the official bureaucrats, as when G. K. Chesterton first fulminated against replacement of aristocracy and plutocracy by public-sector imperialism:

We only know the last sad squires ride slowly towards the sea,
And a new people takes the land;
and still it is not we.
They have given us into the hands of the new unhappy lords,
Lords without anger and honour, who dare not carry their swords.
They fight by shuffling papers.

And, said Chesterton in a phrase that sums up the welfare-mismanaging state, "the load of their loveless pity is worse than the ancient wrongs".

Today, however, the breakdown of public confidence seems more likely to be directed against politicians. This is an unexpected consequence of television.

Paranoic Poodle

For the first time since Pericles, democratic electors can daily see and hear in their own drawing-rooms those whom they vote for. Democracy has thereby become a system of picking men with the qualities characteristic of good television or cinema actors (eg., prima donnas skilled in dissembling?), and then putting them into an adversary daily work environment which would turn a poodle into a paranoiac (listen to any broadcast of the British House of Commons), and asking them amid power and egomania (but also amid occasional appallingly unjust slander) to spend half our money for us, until somebody hears some tape of what they have been saying to each other in private, when there arises a great clamor to put them into prison instead.

The new tradition of loyally and secretly doing whatever is bureaucratically convenient means that (a) the decision process through "democratically-elected politicians" has broken down, and (b) the reaction is about to begin against delegating so many activites to them. Fortunately, technology is anyway going to make it much more efficient not to delegate to them so much.

To summarize. The power of government is going to be diminished, for five reasons. The first is that a reaction is now in train against public-sector imperialism. The second is that the productivity of public spending has disappeared. The third is that the system of follow-our-chosen leader has now become a system for being led by dissembling television actors whom the system itself can then drive neurotic.

The fourth and biggest reason is that the computer revolution is going to make all of the information industry (including bureaucracy) a field for small scale experimental entrepreneurship instead of from-the-top-down managerial hierarchies. The fifth is that the rather small revolt against price inflation is now accidentally setting the larger revolt against public-sector imperialism in train.

Sayonara Means the Sack

By MARK MURRAY

TOKYO — The sack has arrived in Japan. And for a generation that has known little job insecurity it has come as an unpleasant shock. It's a bit like a child finally discovering there is no Santa Claus.

It has long been thought that a regular worker in Japan is guaranteed continuous employment with his company until mandatory retirement, except in the case of serious misconduct. This idea became deeply entrenched during the post-war era of rapid economic expansion, when the prevailing assumption was that for a large company at last there would never be a situation where mass dismissal was considered unavoidable.

But the economic recession that has gripped Japan since 1973 — resisting every fiscal and monetary means to budge it — has ended this era of innocence. In the first stage of recession, 1974-76, hundreds of thousands of workers lost their jobs in manufacturing industries as raw material costs quadrupled. But most were with small companies that went bankrupt.

What is happening now is that many of the most famous names of Japanese industry have assumed the ignominious title of "depressed industries" and are seeking to rid themselves of a large surplus work force by every means possible.

This is not a temporary phenomenon. The industries concerned are convinced they will never need so many workers again, opening up grave prospects for the nation's unemployment rate (about 1,200,000 out of work now, a rate of just over 2 per cent). Workers are opening their pay envelopes to find heart-warming letters extolling the virtues of resignation and early retirement. It's an alluring siren song: "If you're thinking of leaving here to start a second life, the sooner the better. The company is ready to help you" (with a premium retirement bonus).

Some are a bit more abrupt. Certain staff are being told there will no longer be the automatic pay raises and promotions that were assumed under the old lifetime guarantee system. The hope is that these people will be tempted to quit and try their luck elsewhere.

Dismissal is seldom as abrupt as in the West. The latest example is Mitsubishi Heavy Industries, part of the massive industrial combine that often seems to run Japan. Mainly due to problems in its shipbuilding division, MHI has slashed its work force from 80,000 to 66,000 in the past three years, and wants to get rid of another 10,000 by 1980.

In the case of MHI and other major firms, some workers are likely to find new jobs with affiliates (Mitsubishi Motors absorbed some of the previous MHI exodus, for example). But the real test will come when companies find that they still have too many workers even after every indirect method has been endorsed. OK Electric, a major electronics firm, has already challenged the taboo: 300 employees are to be fired.

Most industrial commentators concede that the simplistic view that a man's job is guaranteed for life is definitely on the way out. To realize this, one only has to look at recent moves in top corporations to set a "voluntary" mid-career retirement age, usually 45.

Related to this is the assault on another Japanese sacred cow: the seniority system. Ability and performance for the first time are beginning to count more than length of service in determining pay structures. A worker past 45 may no longer get a pay raise if he is not producing.

Many businessmen see this as inevitable if Japan is to modernize its industrial structure to cope with the challenges of the last two decades of this century. Many of the systems that built Japan Inc. are no longer feasible.

The big hurdle to be faced is union attitudes. In the past labor's clout has been relatively negligible, despite the noise made every spring in the annual wage offensive (Shunto), whose days also seem numbered. The lifetime employment system and seniority system has helped grease the wheels of industry and avoid the sort of divisive labor relations that have hurt other countries. However, the union emphasis is now turning from big wage demands to protecting members' jobs and livelihood.

In some parts of the country it is literally a life and death struggle. Nippon Steel Corporation, for example, has announced plans to close its steel mill and mine in the small city of Kamaishi as part of a major rationalization movement.

Ten thousand people will lose their jobs and Kamaishi will virtually lose its raison d'etre.

City authorities and the unions are now joining forces pledged to use every means to force Nippon Steel to change its mind. The old work systems certainly won't die out without a long struggle.

Place 3 to 4 lb. cut up chicken in a large bowl and pour mixture over. Cover and allow to marinate in refrigerator overnight, turning occasionally. Beat 1 egg and 1 tbsp. milk together and add 1 tsp. soy sauce. Dip marinated chicken in egg-milk-soy mixture then roll in bread crumbs (approximately 1½ cups). Fry in pan over moderate heat until done or place in 375 degree F. oven for approximately 1 hour. Serves 6 to 8.

'Door Isn't Shut' On Sidney Island

The provincial government hasn't closed the door on the purchase of the rest of Sidney Island for a park, Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis said Tuesday.

Cabinet responsibility for parkland acquisition now belongs to Lands, Parks and Housing Minister Jim Chabot, but Curtis is the MLA for Saanich and the Islands and says he is sympathetic to the idea of expanding the existing park at Sidney Spit.

A public campaign has been launched to prod the government into purchasing the island before it is sold to a developer.

But the government hasn't exactly leaped at owner Jack Todd's offer to let the island go for $3.7 million.

Because of that lack of response, Todd put the island on the open market. At least one developer is looking at the six-mile long island off the north end of Saanich Peninsula.

"I don't think that the door is shut, locked and firmly bolted," Curtis said. "But, frankly, part of the problem is the price."

Curtis said a compromise might be to buy some of the remaining acreage to expand the park.

"I've not given up the battle. You can tell them that."

Scientist Going To Geneva

A Victoria scientist next month will support the expansion of global atmospheric research at a world climate conference being sponsored in Geneva by the World Meteorological Organization.

Dr. R.W. Stewart, director-general of the Institute of Ocean Sciences at Patricia Bay, is part of a study group which will discuss and confirm the work of the Global Atmospheric Research Program during the second week of the conference Feb. 12-23.

The First Global Experiment, of which GARP is part, is essentially a meteorological experiment directed to understanding climate change and improving long-term weather forecasting.

Stewart said it is no longer necessary to be as helpless about climate change as in the past. It is possible to make provision for changes which involve a wide range of human activities, and knowledge outside the oceanographic and atmospheric sciences should be part of the process.

Wider recognition of the impact of climate change can be achieved by involving agriculturalists, water resources people, energy planners, housing planners and demographers, to mention some, Stewart said.

Two Years For Robbery

A 32-year-old city man was sentenced in county court Tuesday to two years less one day in jail after pleading guilty to robbery with threats of violence on Dec. 9 at the Kentucky Fried Chicken Shop, 1555 Hillside.

Ronald Charles Woods was also placed on probation for two years after the sentence expires and ordered to abstain from drinking and to seek alcoholic counselling.

"I am giving you, whether you think so or not, a very substantial break," said Judge Leslie Cashman, who said it was not a stupid crime but a deliberate one.

He also sentenced Woods to three months in jail for theft under $200 for grabbing a handful of bills from the till at AB Grocery, 526 Head, on Dec. 12. He had been charged with robbery with violence but pleaded guilty to the lesser offence of theft.

He recommended Woods serve the term in a forestry camp but that he be assessed to see if he is a suitable candidate for Alouette River which offers alcohol counselling.

Crown counsel Peter Birkett said Woods entered the fast-food outlet two minutes before midnight with a club at his side and ordered waitress Anne MacMillan to open the till and hand over the money. He left with $228.

In the second incident, Eleanor Bruce, who was working in the grocery at 5 p.m., scratched his face and chased him out of the store with a broomstick.

Defence counsel Brian MacKenzie said restitution has been made in both incidents and said no overt acts of violence occurred.

In another case, Cashman sentenced Harold Hector Totten, 45, to 15 months in jail with a recommendation that it be served at Alouette River for treatment of his alcohol problem.

He told Totten that without the problem, he would have sentenced him to 10 to 15 years in jail for breaking and entering and theft of $14 worth of food from a house at 1040 Princess on Sept. 24.

Cashman told Totten that society views breaking and entering a home such a serious offence that the maximum penalty is life imprisonment.

Totten has 30 criminal convictions starting when he was 17 in Calgary including a seven-year sentence for robbery with violence in Burnaby in 1963.

Totten, represented in court by Chris Considine, told Cashman if it hadn't been for drugs he wouldn't have been in court so often.

"I don't use drugs no more," he said. "I didn't know I had an alcohol problem. But I still do believe I can do something about it and I'd just like that opportunity."

After sentencing him, Cashman said: "You better turn your life around."

Youth Guilty Of Obstructing

David Paul Riopka, 18, was found guilty by a county court jury Tuesday after one hour and 40 minutes deliberation of obstructing two Esquimalt policemen Sept. 8.

He will be sentenced by Judge Montague Drake Jan. 29 after a pre-sentence report is prepared by a social worker.

The jury found Riopka not guilty of assaulting Sgt. Frank Mitchell and Constable Gordon Jenkins.

Drake had told the jury that because the assault and obstruction charges arose from the same incident, Riopka could not be found guilty on both assault and obstruction.

Mitchell had stopped his patrol car in the 800-block Ellery where a group of teen-agers had gathered and found an intoxicated girl lying down. He tried to take her home but she resisted and some teen-agers supported her.

Constable Russell Baker of Esquimalt, who responded with Jenkins to Mitchell's call for assistance, said Riopka pushed and pulled Mitchell and Jenkins. Riopka testified he never touched either man.

David Vanhumbeck said he didn't see Riopka push or pull either policeman but the youth was screaming and yelling "police brutality."

Drake told the jury that if it accepted Baker's testimony, what happened amounted to an obstruction and not to an assault. The crux of the case, he said, was whether the jury accepted Baker's evidence or was he mistaken.

Before the Judge

A 19-year-old American charged in the strangulation of a Victoria model last May appeared in provincial court Tuesday without a lawyer.

Tommy Ross, escorted to Victoria from Los Angeles Saturday by city detectives, told the court he was remanded by a justice of the peace after his arrival so he could obtain counsel.

"Nobody came to talk to me," he told Judge Fred Green.

A Salvation Army officer, responsible for taking application for legal aid, told the court there had not at that time been a request for assistance.

Green remanded Ross until today so he can get a lawyer to answer the first-degree murder charge laid in the May 15 death of Janice Forbes, 26, of 1017 Queens.

Michael Delaney, 33, of Arkansas, was remanded in custody after a brief appearance on theft and weapon charges laid in connection with the grounding Sunday in Esquimalt Lagoon of a fishboat reported stolen Saturday in Blaine.

Crown prosecutor Robert Mulligan requested the remand so he can get information on Delaney's background for the bail hearing expected Thursday.

A fisherman from Mission was remanded until Jan. 30 to obtain counsel after he pleaded not guilty to three charges under the B.C. Fisheries Act involving the molesting, the unlawful disturbing and the attempted killing by shooting of sea lions.

Ellis M. Iverson was charged after an Oct. 9 incident near Race Rocks.

A 52-year-old unemployed merchant seaman got his wish when Judge Green sentenced him to six months inprisonment with the recommendation that it be served at the Alouette River alcohol treatment unit.

Sanford Cameron, 545 Johnson, told the court he had been drinking and had no recollection of smashing a $383 window Monday night at a downtowm financial insitution.

But he pleaded guilty to wilful damage, and requested treatment for his alcoholism.

A 33-year-old Vancouver man got four months tacked on to the eight-month sentence he is already serving on a Vancouver conviction at the Jordan River Camp.

Dennis Bristo pleaded guilty to shoplifting seven pairs of jeans from a downtown Vancouver department store last October.

Mark Fisher, 18, of 1032 Oliphant, was given a suspended sentence after he changed his plea to guilty on a charge of possession of a prohibited weapon. The Crown subsequently ordered a stay of proceedings on an assault charge.

Judge Green appeared unfamiliar with the restricted weapon in question, nunchaku sticks, and the weapon was produced for him. He was told its use is rare in Victoria.

Fisher will not be allowed during his probation to possess any kind of weapon.

The following were fined for drinking-driving offences: Garth Davies, 17, of 70 St. Giles, $250; Stewart Edmondson, 47, of 2658 Belmont, $400.

Timber Giants' Waste Slammed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Inefficient operations and wastage by the large forest companies are hurting British Columbia's chances of competing in world markets, the president of the Truck Loggers' Association of B.C. said Tuesday.

Dave O'Connor said the province's new Forest Act must be amended to prevent the large firms from monopolizing the industry. He noted that the holders of eight tree farm licences control 80 per cent of the province's coastal log supplies.

O'Connor, whose association represents independent owner-operator loggers, said research by his group and by the International Woodworkers of America showed that poor technology is wasting logs.

Other research indicates that large companies are cutting about 10 per cent less timber than permitted, with a resultant loss of 10,000 to 12,000 jobs.

On the other hand, O'Connor said, employment opportunities will decrease as the large companies begin to modernize their operations.

His remarks came at the opening of the association's convention.

Jack Munro, IWA western region president, said his union will issue a new, comprehensive policy on tree farming in the next couple of months.

He told delegates that Canadians are the most irresponsible tree farmers in the world.

It is no coincidence, he said, that the industry most dominated by giant firms also uses the least amount of wood it cuts, and has the least efficient manufacturing plants.

The union has urged the provincial government to amend legislation on tree farming to include stronger provisions for more controlled development.

Department Demolition Depresses Ex-Deputy

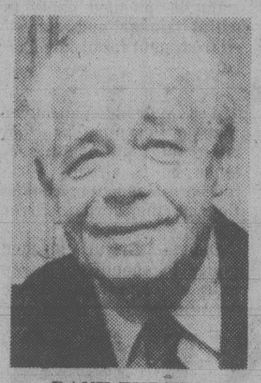

The man responsible for organizing the B.C. provincial parks system deplores the government decision to eliminate the department of conservation and recreation.

Dave Turner, former deputy recreation and conservation minister during the W. A. C. Bennett regime, established the department 21 years ago.

Turner, now retired, said other provinces and states followed B.C.'s example in setting up similar departments.

"It was an efficient department," he said. "It was praised by other governments in North America."

The parks branch has been placed under the ministry of lands and housing, the wildlife branch under the ministry of environment and other agencies, such as the photographic branch, under the ministry of tourism.

DAVE TURNER

Under the old system, everything to do with the outdoors came under recreation and conservation. This included parks, fish and wildlife, tourism, the photographic branch, museum and recreation.

Following the department's elimination, Turner noted, applications were made to permit logging in Bowron Lake Provincial Park, a Class A park in central B.C.

The government has indicated it may allow logging in the park because insects have infested trees that have been blown down.

"There have always been blow-downs in parks," he said. "And there have always been insects."

Turner said Bowron Lake was internationally known as one of the great canoeing parks in North America.

"It's unique. No logging should be permitted."

Establishing the department was an uphill fight, Turner said, but he managed to get the support of Ray Williston, former forestry minister.

"We built up an efficient department. We had first-class department heads. Now all this has crumbled."

Ottawa Plans Millions For Forestry Industry

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — New federal government programs are expected to channel $46 million into the Canadian forestry industry during the current fiscal year, federal Environment Minister Len Marchand said Tuesday.

Marchand told the Council of Forest Industries the programs will assist the provinces in reforestation projects, timber salvage and intensive forest management.

An additional $32 million has been allocated to be spent during the next six years to bolster energy research development programs throughout the country.

Marchand said a further $143 million has been set aside in the form of an incentive program to foster energy self-sufficiency.

$159,800 for Centre

Donations totalling $159,800 have been made towards the $450,000 fund drive to build a Victoria arthritis treatment centre at Kings and Richmond.

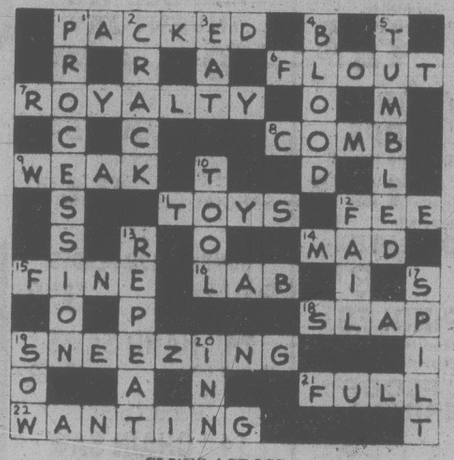

One contribution of $93,000 came from the Vancouver Foundation for equipment in the proposed new building and $66,800 was donated by the P.A. Woodward Foundation for an occupational workshop.

Wyn Sinclair and Bruce Winsby, co-chairmen of the Victoria Fund Drive Committee, also reported donations totalling $13,000 have been received from Victorians.

Donations are still being sought by the society and cheques should be made out to the Victoria Treatment Centre, and mailed to Box 73, Victoria.

PAYOFF PUZZLE

Correct Answers to Last Week's Puzzle

CLUES ACROSS

6. FLOUT not clout. If you clout a man, he may well be too stunned or badly hurt, merely to look affronted.
7. ROYALTY not loyalty. ROYALTY is a common subject of criticism, etc. It seems pointless to say that loyalty, which nobody would attack anyway, will always have its defenders, or those who will "speak well of" it.
8. COMB not bomb. One speaks of a "fruitless" search, rather than a "fruitless" attack. Also, wasted bombs are not merely "effort."
9. WEAK not peak. This usage of "can hardly fail to be aware of" applies more aptly to something bad, that perhaps one would rather not know to be the case.
11. TOYS not togs. "Children" link up with TOYS, rather. Also, "accept" applies to things offered or given as possessions; children don't view togs in that way.
12. FEE not few. He would be glad to get hold of one client, much less a few. His immediate concern is the next FEE anyway.
14. MAD not bad or sad. Badness emerges in the things the character does, rather than in the actress's portrayal of her. Sadness calls for little power of dramatic acting, so why specify "of quality"? MAD is the stronger answer.
15. FINE not pine. The theme of "grandeur" is bigness or impressiveness, with which "FINE" links more strongly than "pine."
18. SLAP not slip. The tone of the clue favors the more demonstrative of the two acts in question.
19. SNEEZING not sneering. A considerate man may indeed try "as best he can" to avoid SNEEZING, but one can simply refrain from sneering.
21. FULL not dull. Aptly, a "FULL head of hair" suggests a luxuriant growth that will repay dressing, etc. On the other hand, one would simply refer to dull hair, rather than to a "dull head of hair."
22. WANTING not wasting. If so disposed, one disapproves of people WANTING or having what seems to be more than their fair share. "Wasting" is somewhat beside the point.

CLUES DOWN

1. PROCESSION not profession. The clue suits something specific, like a PROCESSION, say, or a business concern or professional practice. "Profession" is too broad.
2. CRACK not crank. A nasty CRACK or innuendo sets off a desire for "scathing" verbal retaliation. There is plenty of time to criticise or condemn a crank in considered fashion.
4. BLOOD not flood. BLOOD (if only because it's thicker than water) is associated with water, of course. As an inundation of water, flood is more than merely "associated" with it.
5. TUMBLED not humbled. The inclusion of the phrase "from his high position," while tending to spoil the clue for "humbled," is needed more for "TUMBLED."
10. TOOL not fool. A fool, as such, is never remarkable for patience. A TOOL may survive much bad use.

Law Enforcement Unions Plan Noose Ad Campaign

The Canadian Police Association (CPA) and the Union of Solicitor General's Employees (USGE) will launch an advertising campaign after the call of the next federal election advocating reinstatement of capital punishment, an association spokesman says.

The USGE has presented a $48,000 cheque to the CPA to help finance the information drive.

Saanich police Cpl. Phil Jamieson, president of the CPA, said the two groups believe capital punishment must be returned and applied in all cases of premeditated murder, and for all murders which occur during violent crimes.

"Further, after conviction for capital murder, and after exhausting judicial appeal, the federal cabinet may consider commutation of the death sentence only after recommendation for mercy from the judicial process."

He said officials are already talking about reducing the 25-year mandatory sentences for first-degree murders, implemented to replace capital punishment, because of the $52,000-a-year cost to keep a prisonner in maximum security.

BC Rail Men Hurt

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Three British Columbia Railway employees were injured Monday when two locomotive units collided head-on with a train of six locomotive units and some empty log cars in the rail yard in this central B.C. community.

Kurt Anderson, an engineer with B.C. Rail, was treated in hospital for head and arm injuries and released.

Two other workers, a conductor and an engineman, received minor injuries in the mishap.

Bargaining Off

KAMLOOPS (CP) - Contract talks have broken off between the union representing civic workers and the Okanagan Mainline Municipal Labor Relations Association after a dispute over sick pay.

Bill Ferguson, chief negotiator for the 450 workers with Local 900 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE), said the sick pay offer, which would increase deductions from the employees' pay, was unacceptable. Talks ended Monday.

Ferguson said the main objection to the plan was that employees would pay for the plan.

Burnaby Unhappy

BURNABY (CP) — Council has approved a provisional budget well within new provincial guidelines, but wants the Union of British Columbia Municipalities to hold a special convention to discuss the new limits.

The provisional budget shows a 1.8-per-cent increase from the 1978 budget. The provincial government recently announced that municipalities would be limited to a five-per cent increase in budgets, and would have to use accumulated surpluses.

No Layoffs Slated

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canadian Broadcasting Corp. (CBC) will not lay off any staff members in British Columbia even though the federal government has cut the corporation's operating budget by $71 million, a spokesman said Tuesday.

Systems Readied For BCRIC Deal

The provincial government will use its data processing arm, the B.C. Systems Corp., to handle the registration of shares distributed by the B.C. Resources Investment Corp. (BCRIC).

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said Tuesday that Don Alexander, systems corporation president, will head a special committee set up to implement the distribution of the shares.

Premier Bill Bennett announced last Thursday that the government will distribute five free BCRIC shares to every eligible person in the province. They will also be allowed to buy up to 5,000 additional shares each in the corporation.

"Obviously the development of systems to back up the distribution will be required," Wolfe said.

"There are 2.4 million potential applicants involved."

Alexander, who is working full-time on the BCRIC project, will resume his duties with the systems corporation when the transfer of shares is completed.

The government currently holds all the shares in BCRIC, which holds oil and gas rights, pulp mills, sawmills, plywood plant and pipeline shares — all purchased by the previous NDP government.

Bennett Lauded On Tax Break

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Premier Bill Bennett responded excellently to a proposal that small business get a two per cent cut in corporate taxation to stimulate the economy, a national spokesman for small business said here Tuesday.

John Bulloch, president of the Canadian Federation of Independent Business, said following a meeting with Bennett and Tourism and Small Business Minister Elwood Veitch, he thinks B.C. will modify its small business tax policy.

Bulloch said this will create more diverse entrepreneurial activity, he said.

He also said small business would be more responsive to tax changes than to anything else that might be proposed to create opportunities.

"The meeting was the most productive of all such meetings I have had so far in a tour of the provinces," Bulloch said.

A brief delivered to Bennett and Veitch asked for a two per cent tax cut to 10 per cent for small businesses; a four per cent rebate to retail businesses for collecting taxes on behalf of the government and a 25 per cent tax credit on monies invested in provincial small business investment corporations.

The latter might be patterned after investment corporations in Quebec that provide for local equity capital projects or to support areas of economic depression.

Bulloch said Canada is already a world leader in small business, the sector which led the western nations in job-creation in 1978.

"We're going to see action on behalf of small business this year because Mr. Bennett is giving Mr. Veitch support." Bulloch said.

He said Canada must diversify away from resource industries to continue the progress of expansion and remain competitive.

Bulloch said two areas of concern are an expected drop in the rate of U.S. growth this year, a possible drop of a half-point in Canada's growth next year to between 2.5 and 3 per cent and the effect on markets of the new U.S. accord with China.

He urged small business to help itself more effectively in relationship to government by working through professional associations, trade associations, chambers of commerce and banks.

Bulloch said it would be a help to set up a hot line for small business to deal with government controls and requirements because "they are oral people, not letter writers."

Eliminating overlapping paperwork between levels of government is the first step he recommended for provincial and federal authorities to deregulate.

"That would be a major accomplishment directed to a difficult, long-term, horrendous process," Bulloch said.

The best way to achieve this, he said, is for the federal and provincial governments to go behind closed doors and trade away bureaucratic regulations.

Millionth Phone

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta Government Telephones recently installed its one millionth set. In 1968, the sets-in-use total had exceeded the 500,000 mark. Included among the million sets are about 390,000 extension units.

Power Role Old Hat for Gibson

Gordon Gibson's resignation Tuesday from provincial politics to return to a behind-the-scenes power position in Ottawa is nothing new for him.

His political career started soon after university as an assistant to a federal liberal cabinet minister and in 1968 he became an aide to Prime Minister Trudeau.

His first crack at running federally ended in failure but he was elected to the provincial legislature in a by-election in 1974.

He was named party leader in 1975 as the party began to crumble.

Three of the five sitting members had crossed the floor to join the Socreds, and former leader David Anderson was defeated in Victoria in the general election later that year.

Gibson has been the only member of his party in the legislature since then.

Gibson's departure also leaves North Vancouver resisidents from Capilano Canyon to Indian Arm without representation.

Former Energy Minister Jack Davis resigned his North Vancouver-Seymour seat last September after being convicted of fraud for downgrading airline tickets.

Current speculation is that Premier Bill Bennett will call a general election before being forced to call by-elections in Davis' Seymour and Gibson's Capilano ridings.

By law a by-election has to be called in North Vancouver-Seymour no later than June 5.

Prime Minister Trudeau welcomed Gibson and said he recognizes Gibson's dedication and long record of party service.

TREE FARM LICENCE FOES PROTEST ON THURSDAY

Demonstrators will gather Thursday outside the Vancouver offices of American-owned Rayonier Canada (B.C.) Ltd. to protest renewal of a logging licence on public lands in the Queen Charlotte Islands.

Marcia Singer, a member of a newly formed group — the United People Against License Automatic Renewal — said the controversy involves the company's tree farm licence (TFL) on South Moresby Island.

Forest Minister Tom Waterland has refused to approve a public hearing, and recently announced the TFL will be renewed automatically.

"We say there should be a public hearing to ensure the the forest and fisheries resources of South Moresby Island are managed properly," Singer said.

She said her organization represents a number of provincial environmental groups.

"We are opposed to the company logging the area as quickly as possible and then pulling out. We are opposed to logging practices which devastate our salmon producing creeks and rivers."

She said South Moresby is a sensitive area where landslides are a common occurence during the rainy season.

"There should be no logging on some slopes because if a slide occurs you lose all the soil and damage creeks," she said."

On Tuesday, Fisheries and Environment Canada banned logging on a steep slope in Rennell Sound, on the west coast of Graham Island, Queen Charlotte Islands, because of the danger landslides and increased erosion.

It is the first time logging has ever been halted for such a reason and sets an important precedent.

'Fairness' Case Pressed by CUPE

The B.C. division of the Canadian Union of Public Employees has issued a pamphlet explaining its members' goal of achieving fairness and protection in contracts this year.

The pamphlet says there are 15,000 CUPE people currently in negotiations.

"Because we work for the public we want to make sure our contract aims are understood. We think it is important that everyone in the community understands our goals along with every CUPE member."

CUPE says its members' purchasing power has dropped 10.8 per cent since 1975 because of the federal anti-inflation controls.

Municipal and school rates in the Vancouver area show that the employees' wages rose 17.6 per cent during the three-year control period, which ended last April 14, and that prices rose 28.4 per cent during the same period, the union says.

The pamphlet says the federal government stated that workers would be allowed to have their wages increased to match the inflation rate, plus another two per cent for productivity.

"And so we ask for fairness.

"We say during the three-year period we were entitled to productivity increases of six per cent and we lost 10.8 to inflation.

"It is only fair that we make this up."

The pamphlet also says that during the AIB period and before, B.C. CUPE members fell behind their counterparts in the private sector as well as others in the public sector.

The pamphlet compares municipal wage rates with those of the International Woodworkers of America, the largest private sector union in the province.

"When controls were imposed in 1975, the IWA base rate was 39 cents per hour ahead of the base municipal and school rate. After three years of controls the municipal and school rate is $1.41 per hour behind."

The figure for what the wage increase the union is seeking in order to catch up is inked over on the pamphlet. A union spokesman said the figure is being re-examined in light of the B.C. government's recent statement that municipal budget increases must be held to five-per-cent.

CUPE says the money to pay for its members' wage increases is available.

The government should use some of its $114-million surplus to increase grants to B.C. municipalities, school boards and colleges, the union says.

Corporations are making huge profits, the pamphlet says.

It states that MacMillan Bloedel's net profit for the first nine months of 1978 was $72.9 million, an increase of 93.4 per cent over the same period in 1977.

"Remember that the AIB was supposed to control profits. In spite of the so-called 'controls', profits in the first nine months of 1978 in the forest and paper products industries are up 83.2 per cent over the same period in 1977.

"A fairer share of these profits going to municipalities and school boards would cover the cost of our proposals."

Septic Tanks Health Risk In Cordova Bay: Report

A study released by the Saanich planning department confirms, in somewhat guarded language, that effluent from septic tanks does pose a health hazard to residents of the Cordova Bay area.

And it estimates that the sewers needed to correct the problem would cost about $3.5 million to install.

The study, requested by the Cordova Bay Association, attempts to provide background information as the basis for preparing a local area plan for Cordova Bay.

On the specific question of whether a health problem exists in the area, the report's summary section says:

"If the definition of a health hazard as defined by the Capital Regional District's medical health office is 'any effluent which is visible on the surface of the ground,' then there is a health problem in the area.

"The soil composition and topography contribute to both seepage and quick run-off of effluent and precipitation."

The report also notes that "the presence of sewer effluent is often evident, particularly in roadside ditches below Lochside Drive and along the Cordova Bay shore itself."

Controversy has surrounded the question for years, with many residents adamantly opposed to sewer services because they view that step as a threat to the area's semi-rural environment.

The report, presented to council's planning committee Tuesday night, will be considered in detail at a public meeting Feb. 22.

BLOOD CAMPAIGN CONTINUES

A total of 249 donors turned up at the Red Cross blood clinic at Sidney on Tuesday.

"It's more than we expected" said Red Cross official Gerry Savage. "Our goal was 200."

A clinic is being held today at Esquimalt Recreation Centre from 2 to 8 p.m. and on Thursday at the Sooke Legion Hall.

The week's goal is 900 pints.

Death at Oak Bay Manor Attributed to Heart Attack

A 78-year-old woman who wandered onto the roof of the Oak Bay Manor Jan. 6 died of a heart attack and not hypothermia, a coroner's jury was told Tuesday night.

Florence Young died in an ambulance on the way to Royal Jubilee Hospital.

A pathologist's report listed the probable cause of death as a heart attack.

Edna Galthraith, manager of the rest home at 2251 Cadboro Bay, said at least two searches of the roof were made by staff members before Oak Bay police Constable Barry Parker found Mrs. Young barely conscious lying on the roof.

Galbraith said there were two graduate nurses and one permanent nursing aide on duty after 10 p.m. to care for 150 patients.

Nursing aide Karen Custance said she noticed Mrs. Young missing about 8 p.m., but was busy with other patients and didn't start looking for her until 9:45 p.m.

She said she checked the roof but found nothing.

Another nursing aide, Sheilah Louise Doering, and graduate nurse Margaret Vey, said they also searched the building about 9 p.m. without success.

Under questioning by Wayne Guinne, representing N.B. Cook Corp., owners of the manor, Custance said two more graduate nurses have been added to the night shift since the mishap.

Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre adjourned the inquest to Jan. 25 for further testimony.

Land Bank Broom Urged

A proposal to solve the persistent problem of unsightly private properties in the Interurban-Courtland-Alan area by municipal land purchases has been referred to Saanich municipal officials for a report.

The idea, proposed by Courtland resident Myles Barron and endorsed by Ald. Irene Block, came before council's planning committee Tuesday night.

Barron, who has waged an 11-year battle against bylaw offenders in the area, suggested the municipality pick up all the options on property negotiated several months ago in connection with the Interurban industrial park scheme.

He said the land could be held in a land bank and then put on the market in 2½-acre or five-acre lots.

An obvious flaw in that approach, said Ald. David Paterson, is that the property in question lies outside the urban containment boundary, where the present five-acre subdivision minimum may soon be doubled to 10 acres.

Saanich would therefore have to buy smaller parcels and consolidate them in 10-acre lots, with the probability of losing a fair amount of money on the deal when the land was finally sold.

In a letter to the committee, Barron said just about every bylaw relating to unsightly premises, noxious weeds, unlawful businesses and abandoned vehicles has been violated on a continuing basis.

Court costs and inspections by officials have totalled "countless dollars."

In the the case of one individual — Lorne McNutt — he said the history of such problems "goes back 40 years."

Barron told aldermen he is now carrying on the fight virtually single-handed because his neighbors have grown discouraged and given up their efforts to have the area cleaned up.

But unless something is done, he warned, "I will be back here again and again and again."

In addition to the report on Barron's land purchase proposal, aldermen asked for an updated report on the situation in the Interurban-Courtland-Alan area to be prepared for the bylaw enforcement committee.

Reforms Too Slow: UN Staffer

VANCOUVER (CP) — The United Nations is making progress in establishing a new economic order in the world, but developing countries are growing impatient because the process is slow, a UN spokesman said Tuesday.

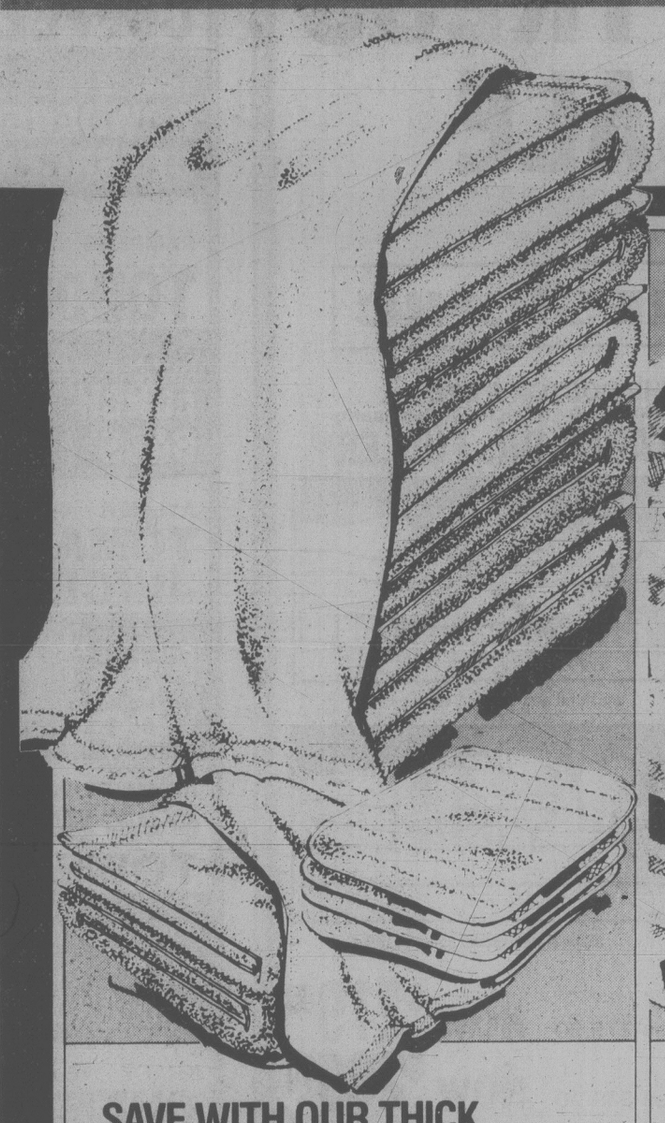

Dr. Noel Brown, executive assistant to the UN's environmental committee, told a local service club that developing nations are becoming more frustrated over the lack of solutions to economic problems created by the oil crisis in 1973.

The United Nations is confident the world can sustain an economic system for all nations, Brown said, but the question that remains is whether countries can negotiate changes in the status quo without waging war.

He said solving economic problems, including the debts incurred by developing nations, is one of the world's most pressing needs.

Ocean Research Cut

By AB KENT
Times Staff

The Institute of Ocean Sciences will cut its 1979 operating budget for Canadian Arctic research, director-general Dr. R.W. Stewart has announced.

The biggest single belt-tightening move will see the submersible tender Pandora II leased for only eight months of the fiscal year, saving the institute $300,000.

Stewart said the ship, designed for oceanographic work, will be tied up from December until March 1980.

Although the Pandora decision represents the most dramatic cutback undertaken by the institute in response to government austerity measures, there could be further operating restrictions involving other ships and personnel, he said.

Stewart noted the winter period is normally a slack one for the Pandora, whose major efforts have been offshore in the Canadian Arctic. But work in protected waters that might be done in the winter will not be carried out.

As a further economy, the IOS will restrict its sphere of operations in the Arctic, confining projects to the Western Arctic and leaving Lancaster Sound in the Eastern Arctic to Atlantic coast researchers.

"We'll be pulling in our horns to some extent in the Western Arctic. It's unfortunate because it is very important and high priority work," he said.

Meanwhile, there will be some saving in IOS salaries by cutting back on overtime and the whole operation will have to become more efficient in terms of staff and work output, the director said.

Stewart said only time will tell whether there must be additional restrictions on remaining ships in the oceanographic-hydrographic fleet, with a reduction in programs.

$160 UI Cheque Now Reads $144

A 10 per cent pay cut for those receiving unemployment insurance benefits takes effect immediately and the Victoria office is gearing up to receive inquiries — but not complaints.

"This change was made by an act of Parliament and all we can do here is explain the new regulations," manager Wally Pickering said.

There are five Canada Employment Centre employees standing by at 388-3321 to handle the inquiries.

Effective Jan. 7, all UIC cheques were reduced by about 10 per cent. This means someone getting the maximum $160 a week in December will be getting only $144 now.

But, because of indexing provisions, those employed now become eligible for higher UIC payments later this year after they become qualified, Pickering said.

These newly-qualified people will receive a maximum of $159 a week or almost identical to the 1978 level of $160.

To become newly qualified, a person would have to be employed a minimum of 10 weeks in 1979 (or 20 weeks for those seeking sickness or other special benefits).

For those steadily employed since the beginning of this year, the earliest qualification period for the higher benefits would be March 4 (followed by a two-week waiting period). Earliest date for qualification under the 20-week rule is May 13.

The four new regulations, which took effect Jan. 7, are:

—Claimants will receive 60 per cent of their average weekly insurable earnings, down from a straight two-thirds.

—Workers will pay $1.35 per $100 of insurable earnings for UIC premiums, down from $1.50. Employers will pay $1.89 per $100, down from $2.10.

—Salaried and hourly-paid workers must work at least 20 hours per week for their job to qualify as insurable. Commission sales people who are paid monthly must earn at least $79.50 per week to qualify as insurable.

—Anyone with gross earnings, including UIC benefits, over $20,670 per year must pay back 30 per cent of the UIC benefits above that $20,670 ceiling. This will be done through income tax.

Additional new rules regarding eligibility will not take effect until mid-year.

The explanation for the fluctuating UIC benefit is as follows:

In 1978 eligible claimants were receiving benefits equal to 66⅔ per cent of the maximum weekly insurable earnings of $240 — a cheque for $160.

Starting Jan. 7, the percentage was reduced to 60 per cent of $240, creating a cheque for $144.

In 1979 through indexing, the maximum weekly insurable earnings rises to $265 a week. So those becoming eligible later this year (by working at least 10 weeks) could receive benefits of 60 per cent of $265 or a cheque for $159. Under the old formula of 66⅔ per cent they would have been getting $177.

CKDA Bid To Boost Rock Fare

A request to alter the programming format of Victoria radio station CKDA is one of two local applications coming before the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission in March hearings at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Richmond.

Commissioners also will be asked to approve a rate increase for subscribers to Saanich Cablevision Ltd. in North and Central Saanich and Sidney.

Capital Broadcasting Systems Ltd. wants to amend its CKDA broadcasting licence to decrease the amount of spoken word material to 17.4 per cent from 24.6 per cent per week; to decrease mosaic programming to 12 from 65 per cent (including feature-type material); to increase rolling programming of consecutive music recordings to 85 from 35 per cent, and to raise the proportion of music to 80 from 50 per cent of weekly broadcasting.

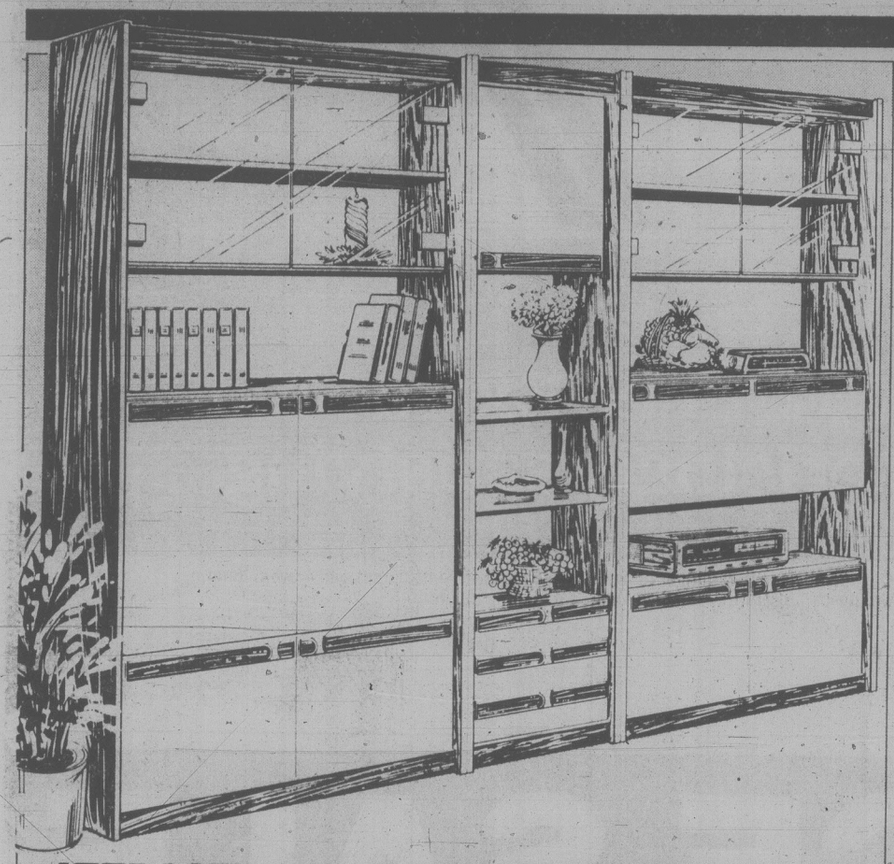

CKDA also wants to play more current music, including rock and rock-oriented music, raising the ratio to 52 from 44.8 per cent.

Saanich Cablevision wants to add a maximum $10 to its $15 installation charge, and $1 per month to its $6 service fee.

Interventions from persons or organizations concerned must be filed with the CRTC and the applicants by Feb. 14 in order to be considered at the hearings starting March 6.

him as a monstrous person, he told Mr. Justice Monroe.

Bierman argued the cartoon was a fair editorial comment on a statement made by the minister that Indians on welfare in cities should be returned to their reserves.

Vander Zalm said the money awarded by the judgment will be used to pay the costs of the action with the balance donated to the Canadian Paraplegic Association and a charity in aid of muscular dystrophy.

Roy Petersen, cartoonist for the Vancouver Sun, said fear of the judgment could wipe out cartooning in Canada, while recently-retired colleague Len Norris predicted it would inhibit work by other cartoonists.

Meanwhile, Vander Zalm said he was shocked when the cartoon appeared on BCTV's evening news program Tuesday night.

The minister said his lawyer has requested tapes of the network's news program but that no decision has been made on possible legal action.

The cartoon also was shown on the CTV National News.

rumors, however, that Premier Shahpour Bakhtiar's 11-day civilian government could feel threatened by the new burst of violence.

The rumors suggested the civilian cabinet could not hope to control a gigantic protest march planned for Friday in response to a call from Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

From his Paris home, Khomeini called today on all Iranians, including the military, to rally to his forces and an aide said Khomeini's provisional government may be announced within 48 hours.

Khomeini said in a statement read by a spokesman that all ministers of the present Bakhtiar regime must resign. Khomeini says the government is "illegal" and Bakhtiar is a "traitor" for accepting the premiership from the shah.

"The shah has escaped with the blood of innocent people on his hands and his pockets full of stolen money," the 78-year-old Khomeini said. "We hope to bring him back to trial and punishment."

Meanwhile, Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and the Empress Farah basked in the sun on a resort island in the Nile River today as bloody fighting broke out in the vacuum he left back home in Iran.

Sources said that the 59-year-old monarch told President Anwar Sadat shortly after his arrival Tuesday that he was "very tired." It was likely he would remain in seclusion for much of his stay in Egypt before he leaves on an expected trip to the United States.

"The shah and President Sadat are enjoying the sun and I expect they will continue to enjoy the sun this afternoon," Sadat spokesman Saad Zaghloul Nassar told reporters via a walkie-talkie — the only link newsmen have to the heavily guarded island.

In a related development, it was announced today that Iran would resume oil exports for the first time in three weeks within the next few days.

National Iranian Oil Company sources said only limited quantities of fuel oil would be exported to create acutely-needed storage space and no move had been made to begin exports of crude.

Partial Text of Libel Ruling

VANCOUVER (CP) — Following is a partial text of the judgment by Mr. Justice Craig Munroe.

"The alleged libel is contained in a cartoon which caricatures the plaintiff gleefully pulling the wings from flies, with obvious enjoyment, with a tag reading "Human Resources" upon his chest. There is no caption to the cartoon.

Literally, upon its face, the cartoon depicts the plaintiff as a person with a love of cruelty who enjoys causing suffering to defenceless creatures. That was a false misrepresentation of the character of the plaintiff, as a person or in his role as minister.

Did the cartoon convey to the ordinary, reasonable reader a statement of fact or a comment? If the cartoon alleges that the plaintiff has been guilty of disgraceful conduct, or has been actuated by corrupt or dishonourable motives, and does not state what those disgraceful acts are, or assign any grounds from which such motives can reasonable be inferred, it is an allegation of fact and not an expression of opinion, and the defence of fair comment does not arise: Jones v. Bennett (1967) 59 W.W.R. 449, affirmed (1968) 66 W.W.R. 119.

Here it is open to the suggestion, as submitted by counsel for the plaintiff, that the cartoon is a bald assertion of fact, a gratuitous defamatory observation delivered publicly and is not a comment but purely a personal insult or vilification, conveying imputations of an evil sort, unwarranted by the facts.

Where, as here, there were no facts before the reader, he submits that the cartoon stands in the same position as an allegation of fact and cannot be protected by a plea of fair comment. While I think there is merit in that submission, I do not find it necessary to adjudicate thereupon because for reasons hereinafter appearing I told that the defence of fair comment fails in any event.

The statement of defence pleads that the cartoon was intended to and did depict the plaintiff as a person who, in his role as minister, acted on occasion in a cruel and thoughtless manner, and at times performed the duties of his office in such a way as to inflict suffering on those who in some instances were unable to protect their own interests. As such, the defendants rely upon the plea of fair comment, made without malice, on a matter of public interest. The defence of fair comment cannot prevail if the facts on which comment is made are untrue and defamatory. No comment can be fair which is built upon facts which are invented or misstated.

The defence of justification is not pleaded.

Reliance is placed by the defendants upon statements made and decisions taken by the plaintiff as such Minister. During the 14 years that the plaintiff has been engaged in public life he has been a controversial figure, not averse to expressing publicly his opinion upon contentious matters. Nevertheless, upon the evidence I find that the controversial statements made by the plantiff and relied upon by the defendants were such that he was entitled to hold and to express, and the decisions made by him as minister were made in good faith pursuant to his duty and responsibility as such minister, and could not fairly lead an ordinary person to conclude that the plaintiff acted in a cruel, sadistic or thoughtless manner when performing his duties. His statements and acts, as one would expect, were approved by some and disapproved by others, but could not in my opinion fairly lead to the imputation arising from the cartoon.

It is the submission of the defendants that the cartoon in question is not upon its face defamatory or, alternatively, being a political cartoon, it ought not to be and would not be interpreted by the viewing public as a sketch to be taken too seriously but rather as a symbolic drawing that would interest or amuse the reader through ridicule by showing the plantiff in an exaggerated way and would not tend to lower the reputation and standing of the plaintiff in the estimation of right-thinking members of society generally, viewed in the light of the state of public knowledge at that time.

That the cartoon would interest a reader is possible; amusing it was not. Counsel for the defendants points out that the acts of the plaintiff as minister of human resources had previously been the subject of much adverse criticism and that the suggestion that he had on occasion been guilty of harsh, insensitive, unjust and cruel acts was a view honestly held and expressed by some persons and that politicians often refer to pending legislation as being "cruel legislation". He points to the fact that "hard hitting", provocative political cartoons are the norm in Canada.

N. As was said by Dickson, J. in Chernesky v. Armadale Publishers Limited et all (1978) 6 W.W.R. 618, "the law of defamation must strike a fair balance between the protection of reputation and the protection of free speech."

Because the plaintiff occupies a public position, engaged upon matters of public interest, he is liable to proper criticism, but the freedom of the press and of political cartoonists is a freedom governed by law and is not a freedom to make untrue defamatory statements.

The publisher of a newspaper or a political cartoonist has no special immunity from the application of general laws, and in the matter of comment they are in no better or worse position than any other citizen. Such laws impose no unreasonable restrictions upon freedom of speech and provide ample scope for lampooning public figures by political cartoonists. The public have an interest in the maintenance of the public character of public men, and the law does not sanction attacks upon them, destructive of their honour and character, and made without any foundation.

It was the responsibility of the plaintiff to determine priorities and to decide how the money available to his ministry should be spent. Criticism of such decisions was, of course, perfectly proper but to reflect on his personal character is another matter.

After consideration I have reached the conclusion that considered symbolically, allegorically or satirically, as it should be and would be by the viewing public, the cartoon was defamatory because in the natural and ordinary meaning that viewers would attribute to it, it meant and would be understood to mean that the plaintiff is a person of a cruel and sadistic nature who enjoys inflicting suffering on helpless persons, said false pictorial representation adversely affecting and lowering his reputation and standing in the estimation of right-thinking members of society generally by exposing him to hatred, contempt or ridicule, and disparaging him in his office as minister of Human Resources, and upon the evidence I find that the cartoon was not objectively a fair comment upon facts.

Batt's Back

James Freeman Batt, also known as Sunshine Jim, is at it again . . . working at discoveries to benefit mankind. Now it's a disc-charged cleaning fluid.

'Laugh Item' No Giggle?

max low

Knew I should have stuck to taking Mondays off.

But every now and then I get this guilt feeling that I'm not starting the week in an industrious fashion along with everyone else. So I come in and no one phones me all day because I'm not supposed to be here.

The only people looking for me are those who don't expect anyone to be here; those who don't expect anyone to listen. Like Sunshine Jim.

The last time we heard from James Freeman Batt was a couple of years ago when he waltzed into the newsroom with his latest invention: the Freeman Energy Disc and an assorted supply of plastic bottles of disc-charged cleaning fluids.

True to form, Jim breezes in this week, behaving as though no one ever told him Monday was different.

"It was a laugh item when it first came out," he says as I sit staring at the glittering gold four square-inch disc. That's all right, I tell him. He's quite safe this time as I don't laugh much on Mondays.

Now it's not that I mind sitting with James Freeman Batt discussing discoveries that will benefit mankind, even on a Monday. But what I can't face so early in the week is (having already gone through the breakfast routine and the cleaning up that goes with it) a pile of dirty dishes on my desk.

Would I kid you?

You see, Sunshine Jim discovered long ago that if one places a plastic bottle of ordinary tap or well water over the Freeman Energy Disc (no, the disc doesn't go into the water) and leaves it during the night, it will become a cleaning fluid that will clean just about anything — windows, records, teeth and dentures, aquariums, even baths and toilets.

In fact, Sunshine Jim Products Ltd. ("We're just a small company — my wife Rosanne and I," he says) marketed little bottles of the seemingly magic water labelled for different tasks but have since switched to selling just the energy discs so people can make up their own cleaners.

And Jim needed to get the point across about his latest find which he calls "Flour Power."

"Two ounces of flour mixed with a gallon of charged water makes an excellent cleaner for dishes," he claims. "Only trouble is, though, we haven't worked out a way yet of keeping the mixture as the flour goes bad after three or four days, so you must just make up enough for your immediate use."

So there was I on a Monday wishing I wasn't there, surrounded by Sunshine Jim, a container of charged water, a bag of flour and the Batts' greasy breakfast dishes — frying pan and all — scattered around my desk.

I won't deny that James Freeman Batt, true to his word, didn't whisk through those greasy dishes like a smiling housewife in a TV ad. But it's just the delightfully outrageous things he says along with it, without batting an eyelid, that get me.

For example the disc, which sells for $6.77, is completely natural, he says, with no solar, radiation nor magnetic powers yet defies science as to where it does get its power from. And it lasts up to 100 years or longer, he claims. (Presuming you'd need it longer, that is).

Two things Jim worries about are the government stopping him from operating because of the threat to the billion-dollar chemical industry, and the widespread unemployment his energy disc could cause if it takes off.

"And it will," he insists, "once people know about it."

He shakes his head in dismay and adds that after experimenting with pyramids for years before discs, he believes the hardest thing to be in life is an inventor because you're dealing with completely different things.

"We must be almost $10,000 in debt with this stupid thing," he says looking fondly at his energy disc. "I'm just getting to the point where I'm saying 'Hell, why should I be doing this for the world?' But it is for the world. For the millions out there concerned about pollution."

Do most people think he's mad, I ask Sunshine Jim.

"Of course, don't you? he says and then, before I can agree, he adds quickly: "That is, they do only until they try it."

Then they find, he says, that they have a cleaning product that is so pure it's not only biodegradable but consumable.

"And it's powerful, too," he says. "While most people use 40 gallons of water to clean their car, all you need is a quarter-of-a-gallon of charged water to make a big Oldsmobile sparkle."

Well, I don't have a big Oldsmobile Jim but I've been thinking: maybe to get more charged up for Mondays, I could put a Freeman Energy Disc under me on Sunday nights . . .

'Politicians pander to Proposition 13 mentality' — CUPE's Grace Hartman

Man, 92, Turns In Vandal Suspects

A 92-year-old Central Saanich man is credited with ending what Central Saanich police chief Bob Miles describes as an absolutely senseless window-smashing spree over the weekend.

Miles said Tuesday the quick action of Matthew Delamere, 902 Verdier, led to the arrest of three suspects and seizure of a slingshot and quantity of machine nuts used as ammunition.

Delamere was sitting in his living room about 11 p.m. Saturday when a nut came flying through a large plate glass window.

On checking outside he saw the taillights of a car going down the road, and immediately called police.

Miles said a police cruiser happened to be about half a mile away travelling in the same direction on Verdier looking for suspects in other window-smashing incidents earlier in the evening when the call came through.

After a short chase the officer stopped a van and arrested the trio, two aged 17, one 18.

"If he (Delamere) hadn't acted as quickly as he did, I doubt if we'd have caught them," Miles said. "It's an example of what we've been trying to get across to the public for years. When something happens, call us without delay."

The three have been charged with breaking windows in four other homes in Central Saanich, two homes in Saanich and two car windshields. They will appear in provincial court Feb 1.

"What concerns us in this is an absolutely senseless destruction of property," Miles said.

One of the suspects is the son of a professional person; another the son of a prominant Central Saanich businessman.

Miles said the spree caused more than $2,000 damage. Full restitution will be sought, he added.

Burrard Yarrow Bid Low

Burrard-Yarrow Ltd. of North Vancouver and Victoria was low bidder Tuesday for construction of two new jumbo-sized ferries for the B.C. Ferries Corp.

Charles Gallagher, corporation general manager, said the low bid was $57,860,000 for the two Cowichan Class vessels which will carry 360 cars and 1,500 passengers each.

The nearest competitor was Vancouver Shipyards Co. Ltd. with a bid of $62.8 million.

Gallagher said a management team will review the bids, and award a contract by the end of the month.

Boilermakers' Union spokesman Neil Hindle said he was delighted.

"I just hope they make a decision quickly so that we can get to work and help the unemployment problem."

Cash Plea In Minnie Campaign

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Cadboro Bay residents' fight against the Minnie Mountain development project has already involved them in a mini-mountain of legal costs but there may be a lot more to come.

The Cadboro Bay Residents' Association, which raised $7,700 in pledges from members to finance its recent successful court case, is now asking for almost as much again to continue the battle if and when the matter is appealed.

In a B.C. Supreme Court action the association succeeded in having the Minnie Mountain land-use contract bylaw quashed, thwarting plans by Broadmead Farms Ltd. for a multi-million-dollar residential development on the 70-acre property at Ten Mile Point.

But Broadmead has already indicated that the judgment probably will be appealed, and to prepare for that eventuality the residents' association has now launched another appeal for funds.

In a newsletter to members the group's executive states: "It is your board's opinion that we ought to defend any appeal as we are given to understand that our chances of success are reasonably good."

Unless the appeal is defended, "the Appeal Court would probably overturn the original decision by default."

But the letter points out that even with the $7,700 already raised the association still needs an estimated $1,100 to meet legal costs incurred to date.

On top of that the costs involved in defending an appeal are estimated at about $6,000.

Mr. Justice William Trainor quashed the Minnie Mountain bylaw for illegality, on grounds of Ald. David Paterson's disqualifying interest in the land-use contract.

(Paterson's employers, the legal firm Pearlman and Lindholm, at the time were providing legal services to Saanich and had previously had a solicitor-client relationship with Broadmead Farms).

The bylaw had been passed by a 5-4 margin but the court decision ruled that Paterson's vote was invalid, thus overturning the bylaw.

The Cadboro Bay association's letter says apart from the project itself being killed, the case stands as a landmark because the decision goes to the heart of council voting procedures.

"It means, as we understand it, that an alderman should not vote on any matter in which a fair-minded and reasonable outsider could think that there was a conflict of interest."

Copies of the written reasons for Trainor's Dec. 21 judgment have been received only within the last few days. Any notice of appeal must be filed within 45 days from the entry of the judgment on court records.

'People Before Property'

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

A national trade union leader said here Tuesday there is a need for broadly-based political reform in Canada in order to swing the emphasis away from property and material things and focus on people's rights.

Grace Hartman, president of the 250,000-member Canadian Union of Public Employees, made the statement in a speech to a small group of University of Victoria students.

She said it has been said the mark of a nation is how it treats its old and its sick.

If that is the case, the need for change in Canada is obvious, Hartman said, because of the actions of governments cutting back on hospital care, day-care and other social services.

She said it is time trade unions organized to fight such restrictions as well as attacks on their own rights by becoming more involved politically.

"We should work for the election of governments which reject the current social values," Hartman said.

She said many of those in power seem to feel the right of property is the primary right of the land. Organized labor believes the rights of people are the primary rights.

What is needed is a more cooperative society where the well-being of people is accorded the respect it deserves, she said.

"There will no longer be a place in the legislative chambers for the Trudeaus, the Lyons (Manitoba Premier Sterling Lyon) or the Bennetts."

Hartman said the current attack on public sector unions is not just a provincial government move but is orchestrated from Ottawa.

She said it is traditional for governments facing elections to use public service employees as whipping posts and blame them for the country's economic problems.

The root cause of the attacks, she said, is the clearly discernible swing to the right and the decision by politicians to pander to this "Proposition 13 mentality."

A. From Victoria to St. John's, Nfld. is 4,784 miles by the Trans-Canada Highway.

Q. My husband and I are visiting here from Saskatchewan and are fascinated by the huge trees we saw in Cathedral Grove when we went up-Island. How big do they grow? A.F.

A. The biggest one recorded is a 305-foot Douglas fir that was felled near Woss Lake on the island. It was dated as 385 years old and had a stump between 80 and 90 inches.

GVLRA IS 'PRO-PEOPLE, NOT ANTI-UNION' - SMITH

The chairman of the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association said today the employers' group is not anti-union or abrasive in its approach, but pro-people.

Oak Bay Mayor Brian Smith was countering a statement Tuesday from Greater Victoria school board chairman Carol Pickup who said the GVLRA is too negative in its approach to labor relations.

She said she favors pulling the school board out of the association unless it adopts a more positive approach.

Smith said today maybe Pickup will change her attitude about the GVLRA after she attends some of the its board meetings.

"I don't think she is too familiar with the GVLRA," Smith said.

"I certainly don't feel the GVLR is anti-anything. I think it is pro-people."

Pickup's remarks came after GVLRA manager Carl Anshelm accused five locals of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, bargaining through a joint committee, of stalling negotiations for a new contract.

He said he had applied for a mediator.

Smith said the move is not a confrontation step but simply an effort to get the collective bargaining machinery moving.

"We are not looking for a confrontation with the public sector employees, we are looking for a settlement," Smith said.

Both parties have accused one another of stalling.

The executive of CUPE local 388, representing city inside workers, was to decide today whether to apply for a mediator in its contract dispute with the city. The local is bargaining outside the Joint Negotiating Committee.

Anshelm said today he expects a mediator to be appointed shortly.

Smith said a mediator will be able to sort out what appear to be misunderstandings as to who is prepared to meet who and start the negotiations rolling.

Saanich Fights Easing

Saanich should formally oppose any attempts to ease the present subdivision restrictions in the Highlands area, council's planning committee recommended Tuesday night.

Aldermen instructed municipal planner Gil Laurenson to prepare a brief opposing the proposal to lift the 45-acre freeze covering the Highlands district and replace it with a 10-acre subdivision minimum.

That recommendation from the Capital Region Board's electoral services committee will be aired at a public hearing at the Juan de Fuca Recreation Centre Jan. 30.

Laurenson's draft brief will be presented for Saanich council approval at a special council meeting Jan. 29.

Laurenson told the committee he has already voiced his opposition at the regional board's technical services committee, made up of officials of the regional district and its various component municipalities.

He said the removal of the 45-acre freeze seems inappropriate at a time when Saanich is considering raising its rural-area subdivision minimum from five to 10 acres.

He warned any stimulation of subdivision activity in the Highlands would burden adjoining areas with extra costs for roads, fire protection and other services.

"Apart from that there is the over-all regional concern that an area such as the Highlands . . . should be developing in a haphazard way at this time, perhaps 20 or 30 years before it is needed at all," Laurenson said.

The area should remain inviolate, he added.

Late Savard Goal Ruins Canuck Bid

Times News Services

Serge Savard spoiled a spectacular goaltending display by Vancouver's Glen Hanlon by scoring with 28 seconds left in the game Tuesday night to lift Montreal Canadiens into a 2-2 tie with Vancouver Canucks in a National Hockey League game at Vancouver's Pacific Coliseum.

The Vancouver rookie blocked 35 shots and appeared to have the Canadiens beaten until Savard tapped in a loose puck from the side of the net after Montreal had pulled goalkeeper Ken Dryden for an extra attacker.

The Canucks, who have never beaten Montreal here during nine seasons in the NHL, got goals from left winger Jere Gillis and defenceman Bob Manno as they moved to within one point of first-place Chicago Black Hawks in the Smythe Division.

Mario Tremblay scored the other Montreal goal.

Hanlon kept the Canucks in the game against the ever-dangerous Canadiens with several outstanding saves. Ken Dryden of Montreal stopped 18 shots and made three big saves late in the third period to prevent Vancouver from taking a two-goal lead.

Tight-checking by Vancouver and Hanlon's brilliance kept Guy Lafleur off the scoresheet, ending the Montreal forward's consecutive-game points streak at 23.

The tie was a costly one for the Canucks, however, as centres Pit Martin and Don Lever suffered injuries during the game and didn't return.

Vancouver opened the game with a determined forechecking system and Gillis' work behind the Montreal net led to the first goal at 2:01. Gillis checked Canadien defenceman Gilles Lupien behind the net and was in position at the side of the goal to convert Chris Oddleifson's rebound for his seventh goal of the season.

The Canucks went ahead 2-0 early in the second period when the forechecking of Gillis and Oddleifson led to Manno's second goal of the season, a 50-foot blast from the left point at 1:21.

Just over a minute later Montreal closed the margin to 2-1 on a goal by Tremblay during a wild scramble in front of the Vancouver net.

The crowd of 16,413 gave Hanlon a standing ovation for his glove save on Tremblay with 10 minutes left, but he ran out of moves in the final minute.

Meanwhile, Boston Bruins continue to have problems.

"We're in a slump, there's no doubt about it," coach Don Cherry conceded after the Bruins dropped their third game in a row, bowing 5-2 to St. Louis Blues, who halted a six-game National Hockey League winless streak of their own.

Elsewhere, Toronto Maple Leafs scored a 3-2 victory over Colorado Rockies, New York Islanders trounced Washington Capitals 6-2, Atlanta Flames blanked Philadelphia Flyers 5-0 and Pittsburgh Penguins whipped Minnesota North Stars 5-0.

Garry Unger scored two goals and his rookie linemate Tony Currie added three assists to pace St. Louis.

Defenceman Denis Potvin scored three goals and Bryan Trottier had three assists.

REDNECK IMAGE STAYS WITH ROGER AND ENOS

By WILL GRIMSLEY

NEW YORK (AP) — The ballot boxes closed this week on baseball's Hall of Fame election and in a few days they'll be polishing off a corner in Cooperstown, N.Y., for the latest to be immortalized.

Strike up a plaque for Willie Mays, the 'Say Hey Kid from the Giants and Mets. He can't miss in this first year of eligibility. Duke Snider, the magnificent Dodger, is a possibility. Maybe another guy or so.

It's not a guessing game nor a betting event. But odds are 20-1 that a pair of deserving guys will be pushed farther down the list.

They are Roger Maris, the single-season home run king with New York Yankees, and Enos (Country) Slaughter, the slashing remnant of St. Louis's Gas House Gang.

Why this slight? Where did they go wrong? Is it lack of credentials or a personality factor? Has this solemn ritual evolved into a popularity contest?

Maris was one of the "M and M" boys in the high-flying Yankees era that had Mickey Mantle at the other end of the axis. A superb outfielder and a strong hitter, he beat out Mantle for slugging and most-valuable-player honors in 1960. In 1961, he erased one of the most revered records in the book — Babe Ruth's 60 home runs in a single season.

Maris's reward was an asterisk, because he played a longer season, and a rain of torment from reporters and chagrined fans. The popular Bambino's record was too sacred to be tampered with.

Anti-Maris groups surfaced throughout the league. He was booed. He became an outfield target for beer bottles.

Maris suffered because of his personality. Unlike the ebullient, fun-loving Ruth, he was introverted, sullen.

He continued with the Yankees through 1966 before being traded to the Cardinals, where he played two years before retirement.

"The last six years were mental hell," he said. "I was drained of all my desire to play baseball."

Slaughter's career spanned 21 years, 13 with the Cardinals before he started to slide with Kansas City Athletics, the Yankees and Milwaukee Braves. He had a career batting average of .300 with 169 home runs. His true value, however, lay more in intangibles than in cold statistics. He was a fine fielder and baserunner—a fierce competitor.

Like Maris, Slaughter got a reputation of being a redneck. The image has persisted — and cost them proper respect — long after their careers had ended.

You Just Don't Mess With This Roosevelt

TORONTO (CP) — You don't spit into the wind, you don't pull on Superman's cape and you definitely don't mess with Roosevelt Joseph.

Roosevelt who? Roosevelt Joseph, that's who, the toughest man in Toronto.

Four others will attest to Roosevelt's toughness after Tuesday night when Joseph of Toronto smoked out four opponents in short order to win the So You Think Your Tough amateur heavyweight boxing tournament. The grammatical error was that of the promoters.

The toughest man in Toronto is an imposing figure in or out of the ring. He stands just five-foot-eight but weighs a mean 230 — mostly muscle. Imagine a medicine ball with arms and legs and you get the picture.

In the finale, 17 fights from the start of the card, he proved once again that a good big man can beat up a good little man.

His opponent was one John Scott, born in Scotland but in the last five years the pride and joy of Owen Sound, Ont. Scott officially weighed in at 170 pounds, the minimum weight allowable.

"I just made the limit," Scott said prior to the championship bout. "To make sure I'd weigh-in okay, I ate two 12-ounce steaks and drank three quarts of orange juice."

The championship fight was reminiscent of the movie Rocky — Scott lost but he was no bum.

Scott gave away years of experience, 60 pounds and a lot of heart. Naturally, he was the people's choice of the approximately 2,500 patrons who shelled out up to $20 to take in the Toughest night in town.

Joseph stalked Scott then unleashed a series of devastating left hooks to the head. Scott went down and, like the Titanic, stayed there.

Joseph is a native of Aruba and arrived in Canada via the scenic route. He grew up in Grenada and first took up the fight game in Britain. He had five amateur bouts before Tuesday.

"I won them all, none lasted more than two rounds," he said with a grin.

"You don't have to talk to anybody else, my boy's going to win," one of Joseph's handler's said early in the night. "He's hotter than a brick and so mean that when he was a kid his folks used to tie a pork chop around his neck just so the dogs would play with him."

Eighteen other fighters fell by the wayside.

What they got for their bravado was $200, bruised egos and a lot to tell their grandchildren about.

Joseph received $1,000, a trophy and perhaps a shot at a professional career.

Promoter Irv Ungerman got a good gate and is going to take the So You Think Your Tough Night on the road. Next stop is Hamilton, then Halifax, Calgary, Vancouver and perhaps a grand championship in Toronto in the fall.

Heavyweight champion George Chuvalo didn't see any pretenders to his throne but got a lot of laughs.

"These guys are strictly amateurs," he said. "If I fought any of them, everybody would expect me to take them out in 20 seconds." It was obvious he thought the toughest man in Toronto wasn't in the ring.

HEAD COACH OF STAMPEDERS JOINS CELEBRITY GUEST LIST

Jack Gotta is the latest head-table addition for the 12th annual Greater Victoria Sports Celebrity Dinner, March 12 at the Empress Hotel.

Gotta an entertaining speaker, was twice named as Canadian Football League coach-of-the-year and is a leading candidate to take the same honor for 1978.

Currently the coach and general-manager of Calgary Stampeders, the comeback- team-of-the-year last season, Gotta began his CFL career as a player with the same club in 1956.

His career included playing stints with Saskatchewan Roughriders and Montreal Alouettes before rejoining Stampeders as an assistant coach in 1965.

The Oregon State graduate moved to Ottawa Rough Riders in the same capacity in 1968 and held the position of head coach from 1970 through 1973, being named coach of the year in each of the latter two years.

During his career, his teams went to the Grey Cup five times, winning in 1966 with Saskatchewan and in 1968, 1969 and 1973 with Ottawa.

Gotta then moved to the World Football League and coached the Birmingham entry to the only World Bowl championship in 1974.

He rejoined the Roughriders once again in 1977.

Gotta joins television journalist Jack Webster, B.C. Racing Commission member Jack Short and UVic professor Dr. Martin Collis at the head table for the dinner, which annually recognizes outstanding athletic and service achieyements to sport in this area.

Tickets for the dinner ($20 each) are available at the sports departments of the Victoria Times, The Daily Colonist, Sportscaster, CFAX, CKDA, CJVI and CHEK-TV.

Wranglers, Hawks Win

Blair Peebles scored at 17:56 of the third period Tuesday to give Calgary Wranglers a 4-3 Western Hockey League victory over the Tigers in Medicine Hat.

In the other WHL contest, Portland Winter Hawks got two-goal performances from Jim Dobson, Joel Elliott and Mike Toal in beating Regina Pats, 9-4.

In the Medicine Hat game, Peebles picked up his own rebound and fired it past goalie Kelly Hrudey who was caught out of his net after making the initial stop.

Garry Slezak, formerly of Victoria, scored twice and Sid Giroux once for Calgary, which led 2-1 after the first period. The second period ended in a 2-2 tie.

Swann's Foot Tops Bowl Rumor List

MIAMI (AP) - Lynn Swann's foot may wind up rivaling Paul Warfield's hamstring or Fran Tarkenton's arm before this day is over.

Nothing was broken, x-rays showed, and the Steelers said Swann would resume practising today. But the foot, bound in tape, was bruised and Swann was limping.

And that was enough to cause a ripple of excitement in the rumor-ripe atmosphere that pervades every Super Bowl, where a sniffle quickly becomes double pneumonia and a sprain turns into a compound fracture.

It was back before the 1974 Super Bowl in Houston that Warfield, the Miami Dolphins' premier wide receiver, supposedly had a damaging hamstring injury. It was the talk of the town for several days, but it was just so much hot air. Warfield made his quota of artistic catches and the Dolphins blew away Minnesota Vikings, 24-7.

The next year the Vikings were back in the Super Bowl. And all of a sudden the word was out that Fran Tarkenton, Minnesota's quarterback, could barely lift his arm. He could do a lot more than that, of course — and did. His passing didn't suffer noticably. Only the Vikings suffered again, beaten 16-6 by Pittsburgh.

Now it's Swann's turn to become the centre of attention.

"It's pain, but I've been able to take pain," he said in a telephone interview when asked about the injury. "I'll be able to go out there and play with a broken foot. It's going to hurt a whole lot and I might not be able to practise until Sunday morning. But I'll be tough. A broken foot isn't going to stop me."

And then Swann burst out laughing. He'd been kidding all the time. He wasn't really hurt that bad.

"It'll be all right," he said, serious now. "I should be able to practise tomorrow."

Swann will, no doubt, be the centre of the Cowboys' attention Sunday, just as he was in the 1976 Super Bowl. Dallas, of course, is hoping its efforts this time around will be more successful.

"As far as I know, the last time somebody said they were going to intimidate me in the Super Bowl, I ended up the MVP," said Swann, on the end of a touchdown pass play that covered 64 yards and gave the Steelers their 21-17 victory over the Cowboys.

Annemarie Again

MEIRINGEN, Switzerland (CP) — Annemarie Moser-Proell smashed a track record today in winning her fourth consecutive downhill ski race of the season to stay on top of the World Cup standings.

The 25-year old Austrian, defending her World Cup title, made it 33 downhill victories and 55 total World Cup victories in her career when she sped home with ease in 1:36.14, beating the track record by more than a second.

Runner-up was Irene Epple of West Germany in 1:37.44, with Bernadette Zubriggen of Switzerland third in 1:37.66.

ONE OF TWO FIRES KILLS 25 HORSES

CARENCRO, La. (AP) — A barn fire that trapped and killed 25 of 27 race horses has been described as the worst of its kind in state history.

"We've had a couple of fires in barns at Delta Downs and at the Fair Grounds," said Don Stemmans of nearby Evangeline Downs racetrack. "But they got most horses out — nothing like this."

Stemmans said nobody was sleeping in the barn when the fire broke out about 10 p.m.

"One man lives about 100 yards from there, and he heard the horses, and turned in the alarm," Stemmans said. "By the time he saw it, it was engulfed."

Only two horses were saved and one of them was badly burned.

James Hutchinson, owner of the barn that burned Monday night in south Louisiana's Lafayette Parish, said: "They're investigating for arson, but we just don't know what it is.

"I had a fire 20 years ago so I put all my wiring in conduits. The switches were off and the lights were out. "Looks like it might be a firebug around here. Two in one day."

About 18 hours after Hutchinson's barn burned, fire destroyed another barn about two miles down the road. No animals were killed in the second fire, but a witness said a few horses and cows appeared to have been singed by the flames.

Hutchinson's barn housed animals owned by several horsemen, who described several of the dead horses as promising two-year-olds.

Hutchinson said losses at his barn would total more than $500,000. No cause was determined, but the state fire marshal is investigating.

Universities Plan Sports Integration

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

Schools in the Canada West University Athletic Association and neighboring Great Plains Athletic Conference may play interlocking schedules and tournaments by next fall.

Mike Elcock, director of athletics and recreation at the University of Victoria, left Tuesday for Saskatoon where athletic directors are meeting today to deal with a proposal to integrate the two conferences.

One result could be interlocking men's and women's basketball schedules embracing 11 schools over a distance of nearly 2,000 miles from Victoria to Thunder Bay, Ont.

Sports like hockey, gymnastics, soccer and track and field might also be integrated, Elcock said.

The universities involved are UVic, UBC, Alberta, Calgary, Lethbridge and Saskatchewan from the Canada West and Lakehead, Winnipeg, Manitoba, Brandon and Regina from G-PAC. The only occassions in which schools from the two conferences now meet are in exhibition games and invitational tournaments.

The proposal in basketball, as Elcock understands it, would have teams playing an unbalanced schedule. UVic, for example, would play one game at home and one away with each of the other five schools in Canada West in addition to games against G-PAC teams.

For the past several years Canada West universities have each played a 20-game basketball schedule, meeting each other home and away in Friday-Saturday doubleheaders.

Under the new schedule, Elcock said, UVic would continue to play Friday-Saturday games but against different teams each night.

The increased travel costs would be offset by the federal government's policy, announced last June, in which 70 per cent of a team's travel expenses are paid out of proceeds from Loto Canada.

"I think the idea has some really healthy aspects to it, especially in the tournament-type sports," Elcock said. "But where it gets tricky is in the team sports."

He cited gymnastics as a tournament sport that would benefit.

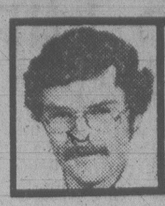

"There are only four Canada West schools that compete in gymnastics — Alberta, Calgary, UBC and us — and I don't think there are more than two in G-PAC that have the sport. Neither has enough schools for a good championship tournament but that problem would be solved by combining the two conferences."

However, Elcock had reservarions about an interlocking basketball schedule.

"It's a bit daft for us to fly to the Lakehead to play one basketball game," he said. "It would be like taking off for Mexico City to play a league game. The distances are almost the same."

He was not certain how an interlocking schedule would affect soccer. Canada West last fall moved from a tournament foremat to a league schedule to decide its champion. Elcock believes the only G-PAC soccer school is Winnipeg.

Radio-Collared Wolves Fall Prey To Hunters

OUTDOORS
stewart lang

Illegal hunting has killed several of the main participants in a wolf study near Kelsey Bay.

Barbara Scott, a 26-year-old Victoria native who is working on her masters degree at the University of British Columbia, has been placing radio collars on wolves in the Adam and Eve River systems since January of last year.

At times, Barbara and assistant Susan Shaw, a student from Selkirk College, worked seven days a week trapping, collaring and tracking the animals.

Now, because of some brainless individual or individuals, she is left with only one collared wolf.

Five others were probably shot during the deer-hunting season. She recovered the collars of two that were definitely gunned down.

There is no hunting season on wolves in the area where the study is being conducted.

The collared animals were basically from two packs. One ranged specifically in the Adam drainage area and the other travelled back and forth between the Adam and Eve.

Despite the setback, Barbara believes she will have enough data in the near future to start writing her thesis and, depending on circumstances, might extend the study and continue on for a PhD.

The main objectives of the study seek to determine food habits, social organization, population dynamics, daily and seasonal movements and distribution, den characteristics, home range size, territory size, scent marking and reproductive behavior.

But the procedure for capturing wolves differs somewhat from the method used by the fish and wildlife branch while conducting their elk study in the same vicinity.

Whereas most of the elk are captured with a tranquilizing dart fired from a helicopter, Barbara has to trap the wolves on the ground, using their own droppings for bait, and administer the tranquilizing drug with a "jab-stick".

After the animal is down and out — which usually takes about 10 minutes — collars containing a tiny radio transmitter placed around their necks.

"I don't think the wolves are that conscious of the collar being on," she said. One of the collared males was subsequently recaptured and "the collar was loose enough so that I could just slip it over his head."

"Then they're ear-tagged and lip-tattooed for later identification," she explained. "I also take a blood sample which is later analyzed . . . ."

Another part of the procedure is to administer a dose of penicillin to ensure continued good health.

Then comes the hard and expensive part — tracking movements with a direction finder that picks up the specific beeping signals given out by each collar. The signals also tell the tracker whether the individual animal is moving or staying still.

Some of the tracking is done on the ground but the best method, by air, costs $100 per hour for fixed-wing aircraft and $350 per hour for helicopters.

With the use of this tracking aid, Barbara has found out that one of the packs covers a territory encompassing about 100 square miles while the other smaller pack utilizes about 80 square miles.

Sometimes following wolves can be a frustrating business.

"It's almost impossible to see a wolf in a clear-cut or second growth — even with a transmitter on. You'll often see them only if they're in a meadow or maybe on a riverbank.

"I hardly see them at all from the air."

She's learned the three main prey species of the Vancouver Island wolf are blacktail deer, Roosevelt elk and beaver.

Males she's seen and captured have ranged from 79 to 85 pounds in weight and the females have been between 63 and 70 pounds.

"They have a pretty strict hierarchy," she said. "I think for the most part there wouldn't be very much in the way of fighting that would be disruptive to the pack. They need a system of order and once that's established it's the way they work."

As far as wolves being aggressive towards humans — it's not so.

"There is not one authentic case of a non-rabid wolf attacking a human being in North America. I've had several incidents with wolves at very close range and they're very shy.

"They try and get away. They definitely want to get away. They don't want anything to do with a human being.

"In several cases they've had plenty of leaway to come out at me if they wanted and I've never been worried about it at all. In other cases, I've walked into rendezvous sites that they were still occupying and had them run right at me thinking possibly I was a prey species — suddenly realize what I was — and disappear."

Besides moronic hunters, Barbara has one major problem — money.

"I'm funded partially through the branch and mostly through UBC."

Any individual or organization wishing to help out should get in touch with Dr. David Shackleton, her supervisor at UBC.

Meanwhile, help might be forthcoming from a different direction.

At Sunday's annual meeting, the Vancouver Island zone of the B.C. Wildlife Federation asked Environment Minister Rafe Mair to fund a comprehensive overall wolf study for Vancouver Island.

Delegates also recommended that the fish and wildlife branch initiate an effective wolf management program to maintain an acceptable predator-prey relationship.

The Nanaimo Fish and Game Club, which called for the study, said the wolf population on the island "has literally exploded to the point where it is now having a real and dramatic impact on ungulate (deer and elk) populations in several watersheds."

Fish and wildlife branch personnel have also noticed the increased predation and harsher winter conditions would compound the problem because the wolves would be more mobile than the prey species.

The club's brief states that the predator-prey relationship would eventually stabilize without a management program given a stable environment.

"However, we don't have a stable environment on the island, because of our own presence and because of a wide variability of winter weather conditions. The obvious solution for the benefit of both wildlife and man is a properly conducted and integrated management program."

Note that this "explosion" doesn't appear to be occurring in all watersheds — just some. Thus the study and any subsequent control steps should be site-specific.

It seems logical to this writer that Barbara, who has the experience and is interested in continuing on for a PhD, should play a large role in the over-all effort.

"You can rent my room and keep all the money if you like."

South Island Mixed Draws 25 Rinks to Juan de Fuca

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

Suddenly all the preliminaries are just about over on the curling playoff scene. Final entries for all major competitions have closed with the South Island Mixed being the featured event this weekend at Juan de Fuca.

And it commands more than the usual interest because the B.C. Mixed is scheduled for the Racquet Club next month.

The Mixed has drawn a total of 37 rinks, 25 from the South and 12 from the North. Four rinks will qualify out of the modified double-loss competitions — the North to be played at Port Alberni — for the Island final at Campbell River, Feb. 9-11.

Heading the list of entries is a Victoria Club rink skipped by Gordon Carmichael.

Carmichael and Tim Horrigan of the Racquet Club qualified for the B.C. finals last year.

Carmichael will have his same rink — Lea Corke at third, Doug Benedict at second and Fran Schauerte at lead. Horrigan is living in Vancouver and not entered this year.

However, Horrigan's third of last year, Colleen Robertson, has lined up with Don Matheson of the Racquet Club and his second Don Nemeth is with Steve Skillings and both these rinks could be threats.

Matheson is a former Island Mixed winner, finishing third in B.C. three years ago, while Skillings qualified for the men's Island finals last weekend.

Other members of the Matheson rink are Joe Laturnus at second and Mary Matheson at lead. Skillings has Shelley Wilson throwing third rocks and his wife, Jo-Anne at lead.

Another favored foursome is the entry skipped by Jack Anderson of Juan de Fuca.

DON MATHESON

Anderson, who also qualified for the men's finals, will be playing on his home ice and has Joy Hoole at third, Dave Hoole at second and Caroline Helgesen at lead. Joy Hoole was prominent in the recent District ladies playoffs.

Meanwhile, two Island senior men's rinks skipped by Ralph Fulford of Duncan and Dave Johnston of Victoria Club will be competing in the Pacific Coast Curling championships at Marpole.

Next week the Esquimalt men's holds attention starting Monday and running through until Sunday. Twelve rinks are needed to fill the 64-rink event.

Spurs Win Replay

LONDON (CP) — Tiny Altrincham, the last non-league club to survive in the English Football Association Cup, was eliminated Tuesday by London First Division club Tottenham Hotspur in a third-round replay Tuesday.

Tottenham, held to a 1-1 draw by Altrincham in the third round of the soccer tournament last Saturday, won the replay 3-0 to reach the last 32.

Altrincham chose to play the match at Maine Road, Manchester City's ground, and was rewarded with a crowd of 27,000. Colin Lee was Tottenham's hero, scoring all three goals in the 42nd, 45th and 72nd minutes.

Second Division Preston North End, managed by Nobby Stiles, England's 1966 World Cup star, pulled off a surprise 3-0 win over Derby County of Division One.

In the other Cup match, Second Division Newcastle, six times winner of the trophy, beat Fourth Division Torquay 3-1.

Chuvalo Wants April Bout

HALIFAX (CP) — Lawyer Don Kerr said today George Chuvalo has been offered everything he wanted to fight Trevor Berbick of Halifax for the Canadian heavyweight championship here Feb. 27, but that Chuvalo says he can't fight until April.

"We wired him last night that we conceded to all his demands," Kerr said. "He wanted $20,000 plus expenses. We decided to give him $20,000 plus $1,500 in expenses"

Kerr said the offer was first telephoned to Chuvalo in Toronto on Tuesday night and then a telegram was sent for the record.

The Canadian Boxing Federation has ordered Chuvalo to defend his title against Berbick by Feb. 12 but Chuvalo often has ignored such edicts.

Kerr said he and others asked the federation to extend that deadline to Feb. 27 because Feb. 12 was too early for them. The federation agreed.

Pistons Blow A Big Lead

"It breaks my heart — I'll shed tears tonight," was the post-game comment Tuesday night of Detroit Pistons coach Dick Vitale.

The rookie National Basketball Association coach had just watched his Pistons blow an 18-point third-quarter lead and a six-point advantage in the final 1:48 — and lose 111-110 to New York Knicks on a steal and stuff shot by Toby Knight with two seconds to play.

"My God, what a loss!" the ebullient Vitale kept repeating.

What a loss, indeed. It was Detroit's 10th straight defeat on the road and the 17th game of the National Basketball Association season that the young Pistons managed to lose in the last two minutes.

It wasn't easy.

For one half, the Pistons made the Knicks look awful, sinking 60 per cent of their shots and forcing 15 New York turnovers. Detroit led 61-45 at halftime and 69-51 after 2:08 of the third quarter.

And then, without a hint of warning, the Knicks turned it around.

"We changed our offence from a stationary one to more of a running game," explained Knicks coach Red Holzman. "The tempo changed when we were able to run."

Elsewhere Tuesday, Kansas City Kings defeated Cleveland Cavaliers 86-79 and Denver Nuggets downed New Orleans Jazz 104-100.

Bob McAdoo led the Knicks with 28 points and Knight had 25 points and 14 rebounds.

Bob Lanier led Detroit with 28 points and 10 rebounds.

Scott Wedman led a balanced Kansas City scoring attack with 14 points as the Kings won their sixth game in the last seven and held Cleveland to its lowest point total of the season. Cavaliers guard Foots Walker led the scoring with 20 points and spearheaded a Cleveland rally that cut the margin to one point, 72-71, with 5:55 left in the game.

NEW PITCHER JOINS CLUB

Budgets Start Drills for Pan-Am

A field of 10 is set for the Pan American Games men's softball championships in San Juan, Puerto Rico, beginning July 1 and Victoria Budgets, who will represent Canada, will open training for the games on Wednesday.

General manager Jack Bell announced that indoor workouts will be held at Work Point Barracks on Monday and Wednesday nights at 6 p.m. and all men's softball players are welcome to attend.

Bell described Smith as a fine fireball pitcher and on a par with Budget pitchers of past and present.

"I think Victoria fans will be pleasantly surprised," Bell said.

The 10 teams entered in the competition are from the United States, Cuba, Panama, Netherlands Antilles; Colombia, Venezuela, U.S. Virgin Islands and Argentina in addition to Canada and host Puerto Rico.

The U.S. team will be a national all-star club while the Netherlands Antilles team recently won the Caribbean championship with Puerto Rico second and Panama third.

The championship will consist of a round-robin with teams playing only one game each day.

The first and second-place teams will meet in one playoff and the third and fourth-place clubs in another.

The winner of the game between the third and fourth-place teams will play the loser of the game between the first and second-place clubs.

The winner of that game will qualify for the final against the winner of the first game between the No. 1 and 2 teams.

The tournament runs through until July 15.

Budgets (nee Bates) last year won the Canadian men's championship for a record fourth year.

Losing Is Not the Failure

Ron Clarke, the Australian who dominated the world distance running scene during the 1960s, is still on the move.

Tuesday he stopped by in Victoria to discuss some of his philosophies and attitudes with an area group of coaches and runners at the University of Victoria and at the Empress Hotel.

His visit was arranged by the University of Victoria, the British Columbia and Canadian Track and Field Associations in co-operation with CP Air and CP Hotels.

During his extraordinary career, Clarke set 18 world records at distances from two to 10 miles.

Some of his marks, set before the faster synthetic tracks became commonplace, still rank highly in the all-time world lists.

Clarke won a bronze medal in the 10,000 metres at the 1964 Olympics in Tokyo.

Because of his interesting personal philosophy, Clarke now has gained great respect as a lecturer.

"Don't talk about the will to win," he says. "Talk about the will to train to win . . . everybody wants to win, but how many are willing to train to win?"

Another Clarke-ism: "Many people seem to be unwilling to try to achieve something, for fear of failure. They don't realize that it's not losing that constitutes failure, but being unwilling to try."

Following an outline of his own formative years and career, Clarke gave the invited group at the Empress an opportunity to ask questions in a free-for-all discussion-type format.

Clarke's first major test and what he says is still his biggest thrill came in 1956 when he was selected as a torch bearer for Olympic Games in his home town of Melbourne.

He was Australian junior champion at the time, was ranked fourth in the Australian trials, but missed out on the team when only three were chosen.

Clarke now runs only to keep fit and he also is coaching his son Marcus who has been competing in meets in Seattle and Portland and who already is regarded as capable of following in his father's illustrious footsteps.

Originally Clarke hadn't planned to come to Canada, but when it was learned he was in the area, arrangements were made to bring him here, even if his visit was to be a short one.

Today he was off to Vancouver and more of the same.

Big Panther Adds Punch

Greg Wiltjer is back with Parkland Panthers and appears to be fulfilling a preseason promise in the Greater Victoria High School Boys' Basketball League.

Wiltjer, a six-foot-nine juggernaut, was supposed to partner Quinn Groenhyde in a devastating one-two punch for Panthers this season.

Unfortunately, Wiltjer suffered ruptured ligaments in his ankle last fall and was forced to undergo surgery.

He missed the entire preseason, forcing Groenhyde to pick up most of the Parkland scoring slack, and had to miss the first week of the season because of a slow recovery.

On Tuesday night, he returned and set the scoring pace with 23 points as Parkland hammered Spectrum 88-29 in one of five league games.

In the other tussles, Mt. Douglas Rams topped Dunsmuir Demons 85-50, Esquimalt Dockers knocked off Claremont Spartans 82-69, Belmont Braves downed Stelly's Stingers 70-55 and Victoria Totems bounced Reynolds Roadrunners, 82-51.

Groenhyde added 19 points to the potent Parkland offence while Rick Clark fired 14 points to top Spectrum.

Russ Mosher led Rams with 24 points, two more than the total contributed by clubmate Brian Alexander. Tim Dean and Colson Coppin paced Demons with 14 points each.

Greg Webber's 27-point effort led Dockers to victory and Tom Pollard chipped in 23. Glen Robertson was high gun for Spartans with 21.

Belmont's well-balanced attack was sparked by a 14-point effort from Steve Salt and Derek Peters had 17 for Stingers.

Totems were led by Wayne Russell and Will Reid, who each fired 17 points, and Gordie Taylor, who dunked 16. Rod Chow topped Roadrunners with 16.

In an North Island League game, Grade 11 sensation Gary Stockford sank 33 points to lead Cowichan Thunderbirds to an 84-52 decision over Port Alberni.

In Greater Victoria Girls' League action, Reynolds Roadrunners topped Victoria Tigers 52-43, Claremont nudged Esquimalt Dockettes 50-47, Spectrum defeated Parkland 43-35 and Mt. Douglas bulldozed Dunsmuir, 70-19.

Karen McComber set the pace for Reynolds with 35 points.

Alex Peden was high for Claremont with 13 points while Cory Aspben topped Esquimalt with 16.

Mt. Douglas was led by Adrienne Mason (14) and Donna Braiden (12).

TITANS LAUNCH CAMPAIGN

Victoria Titans started a campaign this afternoon which they hope will end in a third straight British Columbia high school rugby championship.

Titans were scheduled to face visiting Parkland Panthers in one of three 3 p.m. matches opening play in the Howard Russell Division of the Greater Victoria High School Rugby League.

In other matches, Oak Bay Barbarians are visiting St. Michael's University School and Claremont Spartans visit Mt. Douglas Mountainmen.

The above teams and Spectrum make up the Howard Russell Division. Belmont, Esquimalt, Lambrick Park, Reynolds and Stelly's comprise the Hodgkins Division, in which play starts soon.

UVic Program Open to Public

The University of Victoria opens the gate this week on public-at-large participation in its varied Outdoor Recreation Program.

Wayne Pealo, UVic's coordinator of recreation, says that non-student registrations will be accepted by the athletic department for enrollment in any course. Nominal registration fees will be charged.

In addition to being educative, courses will create an awareness towards the need for safety education in the outdoors and will provide an opportunity to acquire or improve outdoor skills.

Many of the courses will include weekend trips to UVic's Jeanne S. Simpson Resource Centre on the north shore of Lake Cowichan.

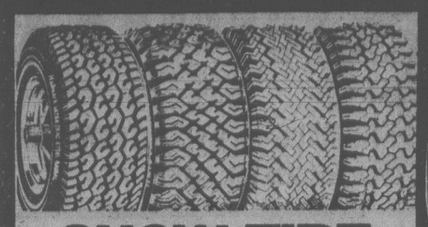

The weekend courses will include winter survival, enviromental education, introduction to canoeing and canoe camping. On campus courses include sailing lessons, bicycle maintenance and introductory rock climbing.

Detailed information is available the athletic department (477-6911, local 4355).

Sprint-Car Gang Grumbling

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The U.S. Auto Club, jolted by the defection of most of the big-name championship racing teams, now is hearing some grumbling from the sprint-car ranks.

"The sprint division has been USAC's backbone for a long time and they've never done a thing to help it," said Duke Cook, a USAC regular since 1968. "They expect promoters to come to them instead of trying to sell their product. They should be out there trying to get sponsors and contingency money."

Over the last two seasons, one of the biggest complaints from the sprint-car competitors has been the increased expense in fitting their machines with tires—a problem they feel could be alleviated by scheduling more events on dirt tracks, which are easier on the rubber.

This year, with 26 of the 34 scheduled races on pavement, sprint teams can spend $800 for tires in two days if they want to be competitive. And the drivers are furious.

"It's absurd," said Cook. "I don't see how they can expect anybody to swallow that schedule," said Johnny Parsons.

"It could be the end of the USAC sprint division," said Bubby Jones. "If they don't run more dirt shows than that, I don't know how a lot of guys can afford to run."

Six years ago, a right rear pavement tire for a sprinter cost $65. Today, they list at $132. Cook, who divides his time between driving and selling tires, could fatten his wallet with all of the ashpalt dates, but even he is unhappy.

"We were told we were going to have more dirt races and we've got less than we've ever had before," said Cook. "The fans and the participants aren't going to stand for it.

"With a dirt tire, you can sometimes run them two or three times with the proper application. But I know a lot of guys who spent between $10,000 and $15,000 last season on tires alone just because of all the pavement shows."

Rich Leavell, a car owner, mechanic and driver, said it cost him almost $30,000 to compete last year. "I can probably stand it financially another year, but very few guys can."

Both Cook and Leavell pointed to the World of Outlaws circuit, unsanctioned drivers who competed in 41 races—all on dirt—and drew more than 250,000 fans last year. This season, the Outlaws already have 61 races booked with a guaranteed total purse of $1.6 million.

FOOTBALL CAMP IN MARCH

British Columbia Lions of the Canadian Football League will hold their fourth annual Vancouver Island development camp March 10-11 at Royal Athletic Park.

Approximately 100 boys aged 14 to 18 are expected to attend the sessions under Lion head coach Vic Rapp and his assistants.

The purpose of the camp, according to co-ordinator Roy Vollinger, is to "further Canadian football on Vancouver Island and provide scholarships for exceptional boys."

Seven scholarships were awarded last year.

Pine Point Curlers Eclipse Playland Mark

Move over you guys at Playland, you are second fiddle now.

Eight members of the curling club at Pine Point, N.W.T., a community 825 kilometres north of Edmonton, have claimed the record for the world's longest curling game.

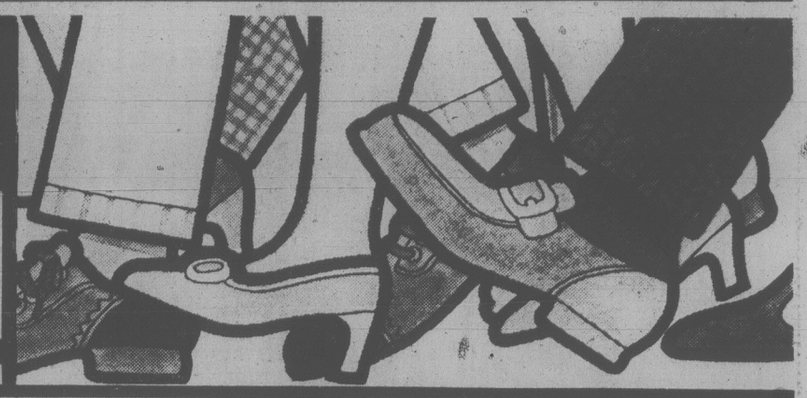

The Eugene Mehr rink beat the Norm Zigarlick rink with Mehr's draw to the four-foot circle in the 371st end Monday, 64 hours and 28 minutes after starting play. The score was 288-287.

The high school band and most of the community was out at one time or another to support the marathoners as they raised $4,800 for their club.

The Guinness record for the longest curling game is 61 hours, 20 minutes by eight members of Playland Curling Club of Victoria last year.

He Couldn't Live On Ordinary Air

By BILL GARDNER

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If Marcos Vela had to get by on the same air the rest of us breathe, he wouldn't last long.

After 35 years of working with asbestos, his lungs are badly damaged and he has to breathe pure oxygen 16 hours a day.

Vela, 60, spent his working life at the Johns Manville asbestos products plant near Oakland, Calif. It was no surprise to him when the U.S. government warned in April that millions may die from working with asbestos over the last 30 years.

Vela knows there is a good chance he is going to be among those millions. Many of the men who worked with him at the plant are already dead.

About half the people who worked with asbestos in the 1940s are expected to die of asbestos disease, government officials say. Many are just now showing symptoms because asbestos diseases usually take 20 or 30 years to show up.

Standards have improved since the 1940s, but many scientists believe that today's workers are still breathing too much asbestos.

Asbestos causes three major diseases. One is asbestosis, a non-cancerous scarring of the lungs that gradually makes it harder and harder to breathe. The other two are cancers — lung cancer and mesothelioma, a cancer of the lining of the stomach or the lung.

Mesothelioma is almost never seen in the population generally, but kills almost one in 10 asbestos workers. Several other cancers also turn up more frequently in asbestos workers.

There is no cure for asbestosis. Lung cancer is generally fatal and mesothelioma victims rarely live more than a few months after diagnosis.

Asbestos is a general term for several fibrous minerals made from crushing certain kinds of rock into a white dust. Asbestos won't burn, won't conduct heat and is used in more than 3,000 commercial products, including fireproof materials and insulation. Substitutes such as fibreglass have been found for insulation but there is as yet no good substitute for some other asbestos uses, such as in brake drums.

Asbestos is such a common material that anyone can breathe the fibres without ever realizing it. Children and wives of asbestos workers have developed asbestos cancers simply by coming into contact with clothing of the worker. In shipyards, insulation workers often stir up enough asbestos dust to put anyone near them in danger.

Nobody knows how much asbestos is enough to kill. There are many cases of asbestos cancer in persons who worked around the mineral for only one summer. A Santa Barbara, Calif., man developed mesothelioma 20 years after his only exposure — one day tearing down a building insulated with asbestos.

Vela has asbestosis with such severe scarring of his lungs that any effort leaves him gasping for breath.

He has a big oxygen tank in his house in Antioch, Calif., and spends most of the day hooked up to it. That tank holds enough oxygen for four days and Vela also has a one-hour tank he keeps in his car and a four-hour tank he takes along when he goes out for longer periods.

Scientists say a person who works with asbestos and also smokes has 92 times the chance of dying of lung cancer as a person who neither smokes nor works with asbestos.

The first known case of asbestos was reported in 1907, asbestos lung cancer was first noted in 1935 and mesothelioma was reported in 1946. In 1930, a British researcher found 81 per cent of those with 30 years in asbestos work had asbestosis.

Dr. Irving Selikoff of the Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York said the dangers of asbestos were fairly well known in 1935. "With this background, it is difficult to explain the curious quiet" of the following decades, he wrote three years ago. "Little was done, regulations were few and government inspections and supervision were infrequent."

The U.S. labor department's Occupational Safety and Health Administration in 1970 set a standard of two asbestos fibres for each cubic centimetre of air in the workplace.

There are a million cubic centimetres in a cubic metre and a man working eight hours generally breathes about 10 cubic meters. So a worker might breathe in 20 million asbestos fibres a day under the current U.S. standard.

Many scientists believe that the standard is much too lenient. The U.S. National Institute for Occupational Health and Safety has recommended tightening the standard to 0.1 fibre a cubic centimetre, one twentieth of what it is now.

Dr. Selikoff said the current standard was developed to prevent asbestosis and that much tighter standard is needed to prevent asbestos cancer.

BIRD IN THE SKY is the theme chosen by 11-year-old Mayumi Mano for the annual calligraphy contest in Tokyo's Budokan Hall. Some 3,600 people, who passed preliminary tests throughout Japan, took part in the contest.

Plastic Mats Saving Sand

SAINTES MARIES DE LA MER, France (CP) — Strips of plastic grass have been nailed to the seabed in a bid to stop the serious erosion of sandy beaches on the Mediterranean coast of France.

Divers recently fitted eight 2.2-metre-wide trial sections of the matting in 15 metres of water off the beach at this town near Marseilles.

Popularly known as grass mats because they consist of interwoven plastic webbing into which are locked bunches of plastic strands, they were secured by half-metre-long steel pins.

The upward floating action of the strands drastically reduces the speed of sand-bearing currents and this causes the sand to stabilize by bonding itself around the mats.

At Saintes Maries de la Mer, erosion of its three kilometres of sandy beach has averaged 2.5 metres a year. At one spot, it sometimes exceeds 50 metres annually. The encroaching sea now is threatening the town and causing navigation problems at the mouth of the nearby Petit Rhone.

The plastic mats, which are the key part of an erosion prevention system developed in Britain by Imperial Chemical Industries, were brought in after conventional measures such as rock dumping had failed.

Even the sinking offshore of a large roek-laden barge only slowed erosion for a single winter. An alternative system of steel shuttering was considered but ruled out because of its high cost and the fact it could provide only a limited answer.

Officials have high hopes the plastic mats will solve the problem because they already have been used successfully to prevent seabed erosion around offshore gas and oil rigs in the North Sea. Here the plastic webbing was put round the base of structures like a giant grasss-kirt.

It was found that the skirts reduced the force of the water by up to 80 per cent and prevented it from scouring away sand or loose materials.

Winkle Being Tricked

MANCHESTER, England (CP) — The British winkle—better known to science as an edible sea snail—is being hoodwinked into giving up the sea's nuclear secrets.

Scientists at Manchester University have hundreds of winkles in tanks, and to make them feel at home a series of pipes, clocks and tapes make the water ebb and flow like a tide every six hours.

The winkles eventually are dissected and the radiation level is compared with that of winkles from the Irish Sea off Windcale, Cumbria, where radioactive waste is discharged.

"We have already found that winkles from the Windscale area are more radioactive," says one researcher, "but there is no danger to people eating them."

Winkles, shrimps, lobsters and other seafoods are sold from barrows in most British seaside towns.

Rome Autos To Go?

ROME (AP) — Air pollution and traffic vibration have damaged many of Rome's ancient monuments so badly that access to them will have to be restricted if they are to be saved, the supervisor of antiquities warns.

"The problem is as serious as that of the Acropolis in Athens, and on a much-larger scale, because it involves the whole city," Adriano La Regina said in an interview with The Associated Press.

"The main problem is not so much the cost of restoring the monuments, which will be enormous. It is what will have to be done to reorganize the city."

La Regina, who was presenting a report on the situation to the Italian government's Council for the Arts today, said within a few weeks access to some of Rome's monuments will be restricted to facilitate restoration work and to try to protect them from further deterioration.

Parking will be banned in the Piazza Colonna around the Antonine Column. Motor traffic will be barred around the Arch of Constantine near the Colosseum and on the street between the Campidoglio and the Forum, at least while the monuments are being restored.

Several fragments fell off the Antonine Column last month, and traffic between the Campidoglio and the Forum has seriously damaged the Arch of Septimius Severus in the Forum.

In the last decade, motor traffic has been progressively restricted in certain parts of downtown Rome.

"I would like to see traffic around these monuments limited in future to essential public transport," La Regina said. "It might not be a popular measure, but it is the only way to limit the effects of exhaust fumes and traffic vibrations."

In the last 25 years, Rome's population has doubled and traffic has become extremely congested in the centre of the city, where the famous arches, columns and temples are located.

During the years, exhaust fumes have settled on the monuments, the rain has turned them to acids, and they have eaten away the features of faces in reliefs and imperceptibly chipped away at the columns. The disintegration is spurred by the vibration from steady streams of vehicles passing over nearby cobblestone streets.

Poor Bustard Given Chance

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — The rare great Indian bustard, target of a much-publicized royal Saudi hunting party, has been suddenly reprieved by the Indian government following angry protests from environmentalists and the news media.

Samarendra Kundu, minister of external affairs, made a special trip to the desert state of Rajasthan recently to explain to Prince Shah Badr, a member of the Saudi royal family, and his falconry party the tide of feelings stirred against them by the press and wildlife conservationists.

Although an order issued by the Rajasthan high court to restrain the royal party from killing the bird was not served, the prince assured Kundu the hunting would stop.

The temporary injunction followed a petition filed by an official of the Wildlife Preservation Society of Udaipur.

Earlier, demonstrations were held in New Delhi, Bombay and Jaipur, the state's capital city, when the Saudis were reported to be hunting the endangered species with 100 falcons.

A group of environmentalists, who protested outside the Saudi consul-general's office in Bombay, described the hunting party as being in flagrant violation of the Indian Wildlife Act.

The Saudi hunters in a caravan of limousines and refrigerated vans, crossed over into Rajasthan's Jaisalmer area from neighboring Pakistan to practise their love for falconry. Their hunting plans caused a clash between the state and central governments.

Conservationists allege that several hundred birds were indiscriminately killed by Arab hunters last year.

The bustards-for-oil diplomacy, as one newspaper described it, has been in operation since the Arab sheikhs revived the old sport of falconry.

The bustard looks like a miniature ostrich and migrates to Western Rajastahn from the Soviet Union in winter. It is slow in flight, unable to climb high and is an easy target for a falcon.

Wildlife experts say widespread poaching and destruction of its semi-desert habitat put the bird on the endangered list.

Curiously, both the government wildlife office and the foreign office are vague about whether the Saudis received permission to hunt the bustard.

A foreign office spokesman says the furor by newspapers and wildlife conservations is exaggerated.

Salim Ali, a prominent ornithologist, says the Bombay Natural History Society, of which he is president, has strongly recommended that the external affairs ministry not permit the royal party to hunt the bustard.

The Communist newspaper Patriot reports that 17 bustards had been killed by the hunters.

But the Rajasthan state chief minister says there were no reports so far that the royal hunters had killed bustards.

Algerians To Vote Feb. 9

ALGIERS (Reuter) — A single-candidate election to name a successor to the late President Houari Boumedienne will be held Feb. 9, the Algerian government newspaper Ech Chaab reported Tuesday.

The presidential candidate will be nominated by the National Liberation Front at a congress starting Jan. 27 that is also expected to elect a new political leadership and adopt new statutes for the country's only political party, the paper said.

Boumedienne died in hospital Dec. 27 and the constitution stipulates that a successor must be elected within 45 days.

Informed sources said up to 500 delegates from the armed forces will be among the 2,500 to 3,000 expected at the congress.

The Humble Fritatta

cooking with kay

By KAY SPICER

"What a fritatta," people in many Italian regions say when any sort of action ends up as a scrambled mess.

Fritatta is the Italian word for omelet. However, the fritatta is not usually puffy, it's not filled or unfilled and many times it must be spooned rather than cut.

The Italian fritatta is a much humbler, more peasant dish than the perfect French omelet. Ingredients such as mushrooms, onions, bits of cooked vegetables and meats are added to the eggs. It's a splendid way to deal with leftovers.

Fritatta was the working man's lunch for centuries. A loaf of bread was split, filled with fritatta and then taken along on the job. Today on Italian tables it appears as a second course in a lunch, as part of a light supper or is carried to picnics. Most people, however, like fritatta best, hot.

A well-seasoned frying pan, like an omelet pan, is perfect for fritatta. If the right size is not available, fritatta can be cooked in two batches. To halve it correctly, prepare ingredients, other than eggs, in the pan, then halve. Also divide eggs in half. Cooked fritatta should be no more than ¾-inch thick.

Northern Italians use butter for their specialty; Southerners use olive oil. One and a half medium eggs per person is usually the right amount.

As the edges of the fritatta start to solidify in the hot pan, lift them gently with a spatula to get the uncooked eggs to the bottom of the pan.

When the bottom is solid and golden it should slide back and forth when the pan is shaken. To turn fritatta, slide it out, cooked side down, onto a large plate. Cover the plate with the pan, then turn plate and pan together, letting the uncooked side of the fritatta flop back into the pan. Cook until second side slides back and forth and is golden. Then slide it out onto a large serving plate, cut like a pie, and serve.

FRITATTA WITH PEPPERS

(Makes 4 servings)

- 2 sweet green, red or yellow peppers
- 4 tablespoons butter or olive oil
- 6 eggs
- 1 tablespoon flour
- 2 tablespoons milk
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon freshly ground pepper

Wash peppers. Cut off stem and remove all membrane and seeds. Cut into 1-inch chunks. Heat butter or oil in frying pan. Cook peppers over low heat for about 5 minutes or until just tender but still crisp.

Beat together eggs, flour, milk, salt and pepper. Pour the mixture over the peppers. Mix well and distribute evenly in the frying pan. Cook over low heat until the eggs have set and the underside of the fritatta is lightly browned. Slide onto a dinner plate, browned side up.

Slide back into the frying pan and cook for about 2 minutes longer or until set. Serve immediately on a hot plate, or cool to room temperature before servings.

FRITATTA CON ZUCCHINI

(Makes 4 servings)

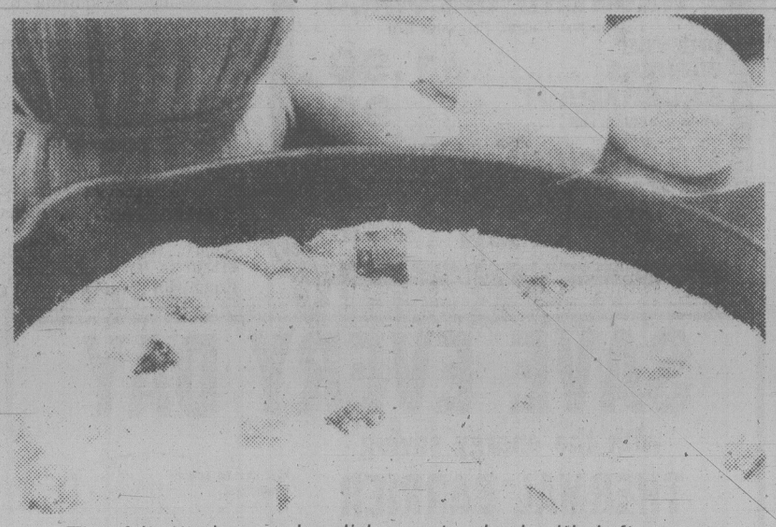

- 2 tablespoons olive oil or butter
- 1 small onion, thinly sliced
- 1 cup diced, unpeeled zucchini
- 1 clove garlic, finely chopped (optional)
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- ½ cup grated Parmesan cheese

Heat oil or butter in medium frying pan. Saute onion, zucchini and garlic for 5 minutes or until onion is limp but not brown. Beat eggs until just blended. Add salt, pepper and half the cheese; stir gently.

Pour over vegetables in pan. Cook over medium heat, lifting the mixture with a spatula to allow uncooked egg to run to the bottom. Turn on broiler. Cook until just set, but still moist (5 to 10 minutes).

Spread evenly in pan and sprinkle with remaining cheese. Place under broiler for about 1 minute to brown top lightly. If handle of skillet is not oven-proof, wrap well in aluminum foil. Serve immediately.

For variety, add one of the following to the zucchini and onion: sliced mushrooms, chopped tomato, shredded raw spinach, diced green pepper, dash of marjoram.

The fritatta is a splendid way to deal with leftovers

GROUND BEEF STEW

- 1 cup sliced onion
- 1 cup chopped celery
- 2 tablespoons fat
- 1½ pounds ground beef
- 1 tablespoon flour
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- ½ teaspoon paprika
- ½ teaspoon caaraway seed
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- 2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
- 1 cup beef bouillon
- 2 cups cubed potatoes
- 2 cups cubed rutabaga
- 2 cup sliced carrots
- ½ cup frozen chopped green pepper
- ½ pint (1¼-cups) dairy cream
- chopped parsley

Saute onion and celery in fat until onion is transparent. Add beef and brown. Drain off excess fat. Blend in flour and seasonings. Add Worcestershire sauce, bouillon, potatoes, rutabaga and carrots. Cover and simmer until vegetables are tender (about 30 minutes).

Add green pepper and simmer 5 minutes more. Stir in sour cream and heat thoroughly but do not boil. Turn into serving dish and garnish with parsley. 6 servings.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I am an attractive, educated, self-supporting woman of 25. I want to marry and settle down, but my 27-year-old boyfriend, whom I've been dating for over two years, does not. He insists that the men in his family (his father included) do not marry. They take common-law wives. He said no one outside the family knows this, so there is no scandal. He claims that marriage kills love — that if two people really love each other, a few words mumbled by a minister won't make the union any more sacred.

I can't see myself going in for this kind of relationship. He says he loves me and wants to live with me, but it must be on his terms. I don't want to lose him. What should I do?

— LIKES IT LEGAL

DEAR LIKES: Tell him that if two people really love each other, a few words by a minister will not make the union any LESS sacred, and, if it's all the same to him, that's the only way YOU'LL have it. If he doesn't see it your way, lose him and find a fellow whose father was married.

DEAR ABBY: Whenever we have a big family gathering, which is about once a year, my father's wife (she's 40) always sits around crocheting or knitting by herself in another room.

She gives the impression that she finds us totally boring. I think this type of behavior is very impolite. What is your opinion?

— NEEDED

DEAR NEEDED: I would have to know the lady's motivation. Perhaps she feels unwelcome, out of place, insecure, shy, or just plain afraid to be in the family group for fear she won't know what to say. Perhaps if you went out of your way to make her feel more comfortable and less like an outsider, she'd put her needles away. (Get the point?)

DEAR ABBY: I recently lost my precious fiance in an auto accident. I loved him very much, but I must go on.

I have a problem I need help with. At the time of our engagement he gave me a beautiful diamond ring which I have worn since the night he put it on my finger. I've had many people tell me that now that he is dead I should take the ring off. They say it is an "engagement" ring and I can't be engaged to a dead man.

Abby, that ring symbolizes his love for me. It comforts me to look at it.

Is it all right to wear it, or should I take it off?

— LOST AND LONELY

DEAR LOST: As long as it gives you comfort, wear it, and don't worry about what people say.

TUNA A LA KING

In saucepan, cook ½ cup sliced celery and 2 tablespoons chopped onion in 1 tablespoon butter or margarine until tender.

Stir in 1 can condensed mushroom soup, ⅓ cup milk, 1 can (about 7 ounces) tuna, drained and flaked and 2 tablespoons chopped pimiento. Heat; stir occasionally.

Serve over toast or biscuits.

Makes about 2½ cups, three servings.

60-MINUTE GOURMET

A Master of All

By PIERRE FRANEY

It is elementary in French cookery that if you've mastered one technique you've probably mastered a few hundred. That is to say that most of the basic elements of cooking can be adapted in one way or another to create any number of variations.

Simply put, if you can make something as essential as a mayonnaise, you can make such derivative sauces as sauce tartare and sauce remoulade. If you can make a hollandaise you can make a bearnaise and so on.

The same is true of an elementary and quickly made saute of chicken. It is poulet a l'estragon or chicken with tarragon. To prepare it you cook pieces of chicken — the same pieces you would use for fried chicken, for example — in a small amount of butter.

The chicken is removed and shallots and garlic are added to the pan. A touch of white wine is added, cooked down and then chicken broth which, in essence, extends the quantity of pan gravy. At some point tarragon is added and this is the basic flavor of the sauce.

With this dish I have chosen to offer a recipe for one of my favorite potato dishes, pommes miettes. The word for crumb in French is mie. Therefore, miette would mean small crumbs. The reason for the name is that the potatoes, before they are cooked, are cut into very small, one might say relatively tiny, cubes.

POULET A L'ESTRAGON

1 four pound chicken cut into serving pieces
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
2 tablespoons butter
10 long tarragon stems with leaves or two teaspoons dried tarragon
2 tablespoons coarsely chopped shallots
1 teaspoon finely minced garlic
½ cup dry white wine
1 cup chicken broth

1. Sprinkle the chicken with salt and pepper.

2. Heat the butter in a heavy skillet large enough to hold the chicken in one layer. Add the chicken pieces, skin side down, and cook until golden brown over high heat about five or six minutes.

3. Turn the pieces.

4. Pull and remove the tender leaves from the tarragon stems. Set the leaves aside. Add the stems to the chicken or add half the dried tarragon.

5. Continue cooking, shaking the skillet so that the pieces do not stick and the flavors blend. Cook about 15 minutes (a total to this time of about 20 minutes).

6. Remove the chicken pieces to a warm platter.

7. To the skillet add the shallots, garlic and wine. Cook, stirring, until most of the wine evaporates.

8. Add the broth and bring to the boil. Add any juices that may have accumulated around the chicken. Cook about five minutes.

9. Chop the tarragon leaves. There should be about one tablespoon. Add this to the sauce or add the remaining dried leaves, if used. Cook about one minute.

10. Add the chicken to the sauce. Cook about four or five minutes, turning the pieces in the sauce.

Yield: Four servings.

POMMES MIETTES

(Sauteed potato cubes)

1½ pounds potatoes, peeled
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
⅓ cup peanut, vegetable or corn oil
2 tablespoons butter

1. Cut the potatoes into half-inch slices. Cut the slices in half-inch strips. Cut the strips into half-inch cubes. As the cubes are formed, drop them into cold water to prevent discoloration.

2. Drain the potatoes and add them to a saucepan. Add water to cover and salt to taste. Bring to the boil and let simmer about two minutes. Drain.

3. Heat the oil in a skillet, preferably one with rounded sides. Add the potatoes. Add salt and pepper to taste. Cook, shaking the skillet and stirring occasionally so that the potatoes cook evenly. When stirring, stir gently so that the pieces do not break. Cook about 10 minutes or until the potato cubes are nicely browned.

4. Drain the potatoes into a colander. Return them to the skillet and add the butter. Toss the potatoes in the butter, cooking over high heat about five minutes. Serve.

Yeild: Four servings.

With a large family, someone always seems to be getting a bellyache of some sort. How can one tell if a pain in the abdomen is serious? — Mrs. E. L. E.

Dear Mrs. E.:

There are, of course, many reasons for abdominal pain in children and adults. Most of them are simple and uncomplicated. Indigestion, constipation, menstruation, overindulgence in food or drink can be responsible for abdominal pain.

Probably the best guide to the seriousness of the condition is the duration and the intensity of the pain. When it is associated with nausea, vomiting and fever, the judgment should not depend on members of the family.

The diagnosis of acute appendicitis, kidney stones and gallbladder disease demands a doctor's skill. Even the physician is sometimes baffled in his effort to track down the cause of stomach pain.

A good safe rule is to describe the symptoms to the doctor by telephone and then let the physician make the decision as to whether or not the symptoms reflect a serious problem. By keeping in touch with the doctor every few hours, and reporting any changes in the condition the complications following abdominal pain can be minimized.

Can injections of gamma globulin prevent the constant colds I seem to get every winter? — Miss B. R.

Dear Miss R.:

Gamma globulin (GG) is one of the most important elements in the bloodstream. It contains many of the body defenses that fight off infection. Only in rare instances is there a marked deficiency of this protective substance. When this exists there is undoubtedly an increased susceptibility to infections. There are now very special tests that can determine if the blood has an inadequate amount of GG.

Sometimes, even when normal amounts of gamma gloubulin are present in the blood, a booster shot is given as a preventive measure. For example, when one is exposed to hepatitis or another form of active infection, a GG injection may be of value.

Even though gamma globulin may not provide absolute protection, a precautionary injection may make the disease milder and less complicated, should it occur.

As for colds, I doubt that regular injections of gamma globulin would be helpful as a prevention. This, of course, depends entirely on the judgment of your doctor, especially after sophisticated tests for GG are performed.

I've been told that I am anemic. Can this be true even though I am overweight? — Miss D. L.

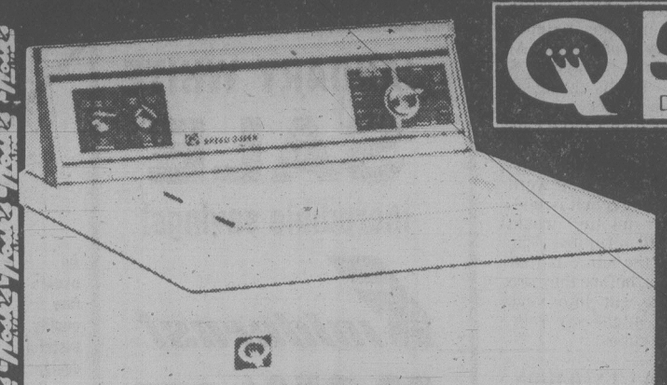

Dear Miss L.:

Some cases of anemia are related to inadequate nutrition. Others have no relationship to body nourishment. Anemia most certainly can be present with obesity.

THE NOT-SO-LOWLY SPUD

hilda beastall

Potatoes should be elevated once more to the position they held in Europe when first introduced there several centuries ago.

The potato was native to South America, and it took the thrifty French to discover how easy it was to grow in their country and to devise ways of using it in daily meals so that it never became tiresome.

Today we are given nutrient values of many foods to guide our choices. We find one medium-size potato weighing 160 gms gives us 105 calories while 60 gms of hamburger load us with 182 calories, with 32 gms of fat in each 60 gms.

The potato gives only 0.1 gm of fat making it reasonable for most of us to add a knob of vegetable margarine to balance the protein, iron, potassium, and vitamins A, B, and C with a little necessary fat.

These valuable nutrients are said to be at highest level at time of lifting from the soil, lessening during storage. Does this account for the finest flavor also being evident in early fall when new crops come from garden or field?

Although loss of some nutrient values is inevitable in cooking potatoes there are ways to reduce the loss to a minimum.

Never soak potatoes in water either before scrubbing or peeling nor after they are prepared for cooking. When boiling potatoes use a minimum of boiling water, add a pinch of salt towards end of cooking period which is about 15 minutes. Use gentle boiling once the boiling point is reached.

Never throw out the cooking water from potatoes (nor from other vegetables); it has many nutrients, much flavor, and some thickening action in soup, sauce or gravy. If potato skins are left on, so much better will be the potato, and the potato water.

Baking potatoes has always been thought much more nutritious than any other method of cooking though boiling in the skins should be equal if the liquid is used for some further purpose.

The thin skin is fairly easy to remove, if this is desired, from both the baked and the boiled while hot, though a bit tiresome. If much pulp comes off with the peel, why not put it aside to use in a soup?

When boiling potatoes for occasional mashing, boil in the skins and put through a colander to remove the skins which are to be added to a later soup with the potato liquid. Keep these leftovers in either small glass jars covered, or in old cups or small basins.

Apart from traditional uses for potatoes evolved during the last century, with meat, many other ways appeal to people nowadays. The potato has a flavor of its own worthy of being developed.

Potato soup with only onion for flavoring is capable of being a complete meal. Try it soon with a side dish of carrots and fresh spinach or swiss chard.

POTATO SOUP

2 cups water (or potato water)
3 cups diced potato
¼ cup chopped onion OR
1 whole garlic clove
1 tbsp. fresh parsley OR
1 tsp. dried (or use chervil)

Cook vegetables briefly in boiling water until almost tender.

Thicken with:

1 cup cold water
½ cup skim milk powder
1 tbsp. wholewheat flour
1 tsp. salt
2 tbsp. soft margarine
1 tbsp. yeast powder (torula)

Add water gradually to flour, salt and milk powder in small bowl, mixing until smooth. Stir into hot potato mixture, bringing gradually back to boiling point. The whole garlic clove may be removed now if desired and discarded. It will leave a more subtle flavor than onions. After boiling for a minute, remove from heat, stir in margarine and yeast powder. Serve at once in warmed plates.

Sprinkle with paprika if desired. This recipe yields four servings.

Potato Scones or Potato Pancakes are another delicious meal. Ingredients can be the same for both but scones will have less liquid so that they are thicker to cook on a greased griddle, in a lightly greased thick frypan or skillet, or even on a greased cookie tray in a hot oven.

Have mashed potatoes left from a previous meal for saving time in preparation.

POTATO SCONES

¾ cup whole wheat flour
½ tsp. baking powder
¼ tsp. salt
½ cup skim milk powder
1 cup mashed potatoes
2 tbsp. softened vegetable margarine
1 egg
½ cup water (or potato water)

Mix dry ingredients in bowl; work in mashed potatoes and margarine. Beat egg in cup and add ½ cup of liquid. Add this liquid to potato dough. Mix briefly. Dough should be like a bread dough, soft yet rather dry on outside for the scones; softer for pancakes.

Pat with hands on floured paper to make 4 thick rounds. Place with lifter on cookie tray to bake at moderate 177° C. or put into a hot frypan or on a griddle. Both need 15 minute cooking, being turned once. Delicious served with cooked frozen green peas.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 ♠	3 ♡	3 ♠	4 ♡
4 NT	7 ♡	Pass	Pass

Let's assume you're South and the bidding goes as shown. West's seven heart bid over your Blackwood four notrump has robbed your partner of the opportunity to indicate exactly how many aces he has. As a result of West's nuisance bid, you don't know whether to double seven hearts (and collect possibly 500 points), or whether to bid seven spades (and collect 2,410 points if North has the only missing ace).

Problems of this sort occur once in a while, and there is a sensible way of dealing with them. The method that most experts use to combat an interference bid over Blackwood is fairly simple, but it does require a prearranged partnership understanding.

Briefly stated, it is this: If the Blackwood bidder's partner doubles the interference bid, he says, in effect, that he has either no aces or two aces. This is easy to remember mnemonically because the natural tendency, with no aces, would be to double to keep partner from going on.

If the Blackwood bidder's partner passes the interference bid, he indicates that he has either one ace or three aces. So, by applying this prearranged mechanism to the present case, South knows that North indicated a holding of one ace when he passed West's seven heart bid. Accordingly, South bids seven spades after North's pass and thus collects 2,410 points.

Some players call this convention DEPO. This is simply an acronym where the letters DE require the responder to Blackwood to double with an even number of aces (0 or 2), and the letters PO require the responder to Blackwood to pass with an odd number of aces (1 or 3). The rule is: double with even, pass with odd. Only rarely, playing DEPO, will the Blackwood bidder have any difficulty figuring out how many aces partner has.

Twice is once too much.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Thursday, January 18
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Emphasis on basic issues, work, service, piercing veil of uncertainty. Get to heart of matters. Maintain independent stance. Highlight originality, creativity. Refuse to be taken advantage of, intimidated by those accustomed to something for nothing.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Follow through on hunch, teach, learn, create, welcome change and challenge. Young persons are drawn to you. Personal magnetism flows. You could win popularity contest. Family member makes major concession. Your views are vindicated.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You break free from previous restrictions. Sagittarian figures prominently. Individual with a "weight problem" consults you. Be patient, but refuse to be drained of your psychic energy. Purchase of home appliance could be on agenda.

CANCER (June 21-July 21): Stick to the facts. One who's envious and would like to see you trip ... will advocate course that lacks substance. Know it, protect your own interests. Aquarius, Scorpio, Leo persons figure prominently. Your residence should be "cleared" of electrical safety hazards.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Emphasis on collections, payments, finishing what you start, delineating trends, cycles, getting finger on pulse of public. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius figure prominently. Be ready for quick changes, challenges and the recovery of lost articles.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Make concession to family member, be diplomatic, pay debt, build for future, accept legitimate flattery without kicking toe in sand. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons figure in your personal scenario. Money surprise is due.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Check behind the scenes, be discreet, refuse to be depressed by buzz words, such as hospital, confinement, rest, seclusion, quiet or secretive. Pisces figures prominently. You know, yet again, that being alone is not necessarily the same as being lonely.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Emphasis on desire, wishes, power, production, realignment or priorities. Older individual demonstrates faith in your capabilities. Member of opposite sex pays you a meaningful compliment. Member of opposite sex does care—and proves it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Emphasis on career, authority, standing tall, community projects, a successful venture into politics. Aries, Libra and another Sagittarian figure prominently. Your views are vindicated, you meet deadline. You have reason to celebrate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Good Moon aspect coincides now with travel, communication, new procedures, resolving of technical problems. What seemed far away will come within "touching distance." Yes, Leo continues in the picture.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Dig deep and you could strike pay dirt. Be specific, dynamic and have courage to talk money with partner, mate. Hunch is on target. Learning process is stimulated. Aquarius, Cancer, Leo, Scorpio persons crowd your scenario.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Emphasis on partnership, publicity, determining what opposition is doing, thinking, planning. Be versatile. Deal with Gemini, Sagittarius persons. Play waiting game, avoid rushing to judgment, be discreet.

IF JANUARY 18 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are a "surgeon" in sense that you "cut out" the superfluous, that you are capable of trimming down to the essentials. You attract Aries, Libra persons to you. You make money with Aquarius and love to Taurus. August will be your most important month of 1979, a year which sees you gaining wider recognition, completing a "major" project. You meet interesting, creative people in January. Your social life accelerates in March. You earn more money next month, February. You could fall madly in love in May. You are a fiery, determined, stubborn, creative individual. You are attractive—and although you might deny it—you are also an idealist.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

Clem put down a carton. "Your Kalotan kujus," he said. "I picked sixteen nice ones at two different prices, $10.34 the lot."

"Thank you, honey, but I never thought they'd be that much," Jean replied. "What were the prices?"

Her husband smiled. "You know Sam's prices always end with 9, like 29 cents. There was ten cents difference between these, so figure it out."

Well?

Thanks for idea to F. C. Asbury, Toronto.

Sesame-seedy crust means better buy

CAN'T TELL FOOD BY ITS PRICE TAG

"The price of food does not determine its nutrient value," states Carmen Moreau-Vena, food consultant, at Agriculture Canada.

Food choices may be made that are cheaper but which contribute the same important nutrients as their more expensive counterparts.

Examine the foods you choose from the food groups and see how you can cut down on costs without cutting down on food value.

Bread and cereals is one food group that is often overlooked as an important source of nutrients, especially iron, B vitamins and carbohydrate.

Mrs. Moreau-Vena offers you these money saving tips when shopping for bread and cereals, this week.

— Select whole grain cereals, because they provide better money value than most processed ready-to-eat cereals which have added nutrients replacing those lost in processing.

— Buy unsweetened ready-to-eat cereals rather than the costlier sweet ones — it's less expansive to add your own sugar if necessary.

— Compare cereals by unit price, rather than package price; large packages are generally a better buy than small ones.

— Select enriched white bread or whole grain bread, such as rye or 100 per cent whole wheat.

— Check labels for added nutrients when buying pasta such as macaroni, spaghetti or noodles.

— Combine pastas with cheese, eggs or nuts for nutritious money-saving main dishes.

—Select brown rice or converted (regular) rice over unenriched white rice, as it contains more thiamin, niacin and iron.

HOW TO WRITE
CLASSIFIED ACTION
AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

The Lord is my Shepherd
I shall not want
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures
He leadeth me beside the still waters
He restoreth my soul
He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake
Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death
I will fear no evil
For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies.
Thou anointest my head with oil
My cup runneth over
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

The Magic of Moisture

GARDENING
hilda beastall

The milder days of last week brought life-saving moist air to evergreen shrubs. They appeared as happy to absorb some of it into their foliage as certain of us humans were to take deep breaths of it.

During the days of dry frost, leaves of rhododendron, kalmia, photinia (in many parking lot plantings), and even the smaller leaves of various hebes, all appeared shrunken, hanging close to the the stems. Some lost their color; any day I had expected to see them fallen to the ground.

But the magic touch of moisture came in time to bring relief. Even the rhodo flower buds, tightly wrapped in their green sheaths recovered their former plumpers. If no harder weather comes, they will likely open in their appointed time.

Azalea buds of the deciduous R. luteum look less well-insulated against frost but they, too, have regained their former liveliness.

A seedling rhodo which has not yet flowered is recovered from the days an nights of dry cold. A very promising bud cluster will get a bit of shelter from pieces of broken fir arched over the top if and when another dry frost occurs. This may prevent rapid evaporation of moisture and weakening of the plant.

The degree of frost present all through the cold days made it hazardous to spray these plants with water as we often do in winter. The water would have frozen on the leaves, just adding another burden for the plants to overcome.

Gardeners who have been thinking the crisp spell of frosty weather wiped out the population of small slugs and other insects might look under lower leaves of vegetables or under large stones.

I have seen starlings probing around, busily working in damp grass where the softened soil has allowed insect life to again become active. A golden-winged woodpecker was observed, silently making its way up a utility pole, searching every crack and crevice for insects or their eggs. Just now there is not the drumming of the alarms as these birds work; for they are still on the move, not establishing a territory for nesting. It is good to see occasional wandering bird visitors in the garden. They, too, seem to appreciate the return of moisture.

One of the most dramatic changes noted is the recovery of the hardier types of lettuce being grown under glass cloches in the open garden.

These shelters, as many of you will know, are not intended to be airtight; plenty of air circulates constantly through the gaps between the glasses but plants are sheltered from the full force of weather. The soil surface becomes dry, which is a benefit under these conditions but below, the compost has held moisture around the roots.

On the days of continuous frost, the soil was probably frozen but we did not attempt opening the cloches for fear of breaking the glass which becomes brittle in frost. The leaves of lettuce, endive, corn salad all lay flat on the soil. But now in damp air and a higher temperature they are again becoming usable.

Fiery Resurgence Of Sect's Struggle

SOROKIN

. . . faces arson charge

VANCOUVER (CP) — Naked women singing Russian hymns while burning down a home is the image many people have of the Doukhobors, a troubled religious sect now undergoing a fiery resurgence of religious and political struggle in southeastern British Columbia.

The image was recently reinforced when five Doukhobor women were sentenced Dec. 27 to terms of up to two years less a day for arson in Nelson.

Four men and four women are scheduled to stand trial Friday for attempted arson and wrongful intimidation in the attempted fire-bombing of a house in Brilliant.

In April, Orthodox Doukhobor leader John J. Verigin, 58, and two other men are to appear in Nelson court on charges of conspiracy to commit arson. The charges follow fires at the meeting hall of the rival Reformed Doukhobors and at the home of Reformed leader Stefan Sorokin.

Both factions hurl accusations at the other and members of both groups refer mysteriously to a handful of renegades, the infamous Sons of Freedom, when asked about a new wave of arson and other violence against property.

At present, Verigin leads the Union of Spiritual Communities of Christ (USCC), about 5,000 orthodox Doukhobors living near Grand Forks, who hold beliefs of the original Doukhobor immigrants.

Sorokin's group, the Christian Community and Brotherhood of Reformed Doukhobors (CCBRD), is based in Krestova and numbers about 1,000.

Sorokin, 76, renamed the original Sons of Freedom when he assumed leadership in 1950.

Most sources say only 20-to-50 unrepentant Sons of Freedom still live near Gilpin, close to the United States border. Both Reformed and Orthodox spokesmen suggest these die-hard purists are responsible for recent acts of arson.

Shrouded in ancient religious traditions and hints of witchcraft— the five women convicted in Nelson said threats of a seven-generation curse from Verigin motivated the arson—the pacifist sect would be difficult to understand in the context of traditional Western religions, even if it had remained stable.

Soon after the Doukhobors arrived in Saskatchewan in 1898 after fleeing persecution by church and state in Czarist Russia, a group of zealots broke with the established sect, the Christian Community of Universal Brotherhood, and formed the Sons of Freedom.

When Sorokin became leader of the Sons of Freedom, he announced that they were renouncing arson and all forms of violence.

He broke with Freedomite tradition by pledging that their children would attend public schools and accept the legitimacy of Canadian government.

But disputes between the USCC and the new CCBRD continued, although abated slightly by the more conservative philosophy espoused by Sorokin.

USCC executive secretary John Semenoff says the bitter rivalry between the Reformed and Orthodox groups is just "a historical difficulty," stemming from the differing methods each chose to adapt to Canadian life.

That difficulty has led to arson damage in southeastern B.C. over the last eight years conservatively estimated at between $2.5 and $3 million.

Community centres, homes, barns and stores have been targets. Six homes in the Nelson area alone have been set on fire in the past six months.

The provincial attorney-general's office says special, high-visibility patrols of RCMP, some Russian-speaking, have been arranged to prevent further burnings. Police have mediated several inter-sect disputes and are still investigating many acts of violence.

The Sons of Freedom began burning their homes and removing their clothes during the second decade of this century to repudiate materialism. But the rituals became more common under external, misunderstood pressures.

Both the Sons of Freedom and the USCC were outraged by discrimination from their non-Doukhobor neighbors and mass foreclosures on their mortgage land at the beginning of the depression in 1929.

"It was like pushing down on a big inner tube with a weak spot," says Dr. Mark Mealing of Castlegar's Selkirk College.

"Irrational violence" by the Sons of Freedom was the unfortunate result of "all the pressure on Doukhobor society from 1929 through 1940, the economic attack on their communities and the social attitudes of the 1940s."

Mealing, 40, head of the institute of Doukhobor studies at the West Kootenay college, has a doctorate from the university of Pennsylvania in Doukhobor hymnody and folk life.

He says the blunt, insensitive treatment of the Doukhobors by provincial government, specificially the first Social Credit administration under Premier W. A. C. Bennett, served to alienate sect members.

During the 1940s and 1950s, railroad switches and some bridges were dynamited by Freedomites. Post offices, government buildings and schools were also targets of arson.

Nudity became commonplace, both for the shock value of the act itself and to symbolize the possessions the government had taken from them, says Mealing.

The most spectacular single act was the bombing of a West Kootenay Power and Light Co. power line. The result paralyzed the giant Cominco Mine in Kimberley for two weeks and the entire Kootenay region was in darkness for about six hours.

Sub Seen Little Help in Probe of Fitzgerald

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — The United States Lake Carriers Association says a proposal to use a submersible to investigate the sinking of the Edmund Fitzgerald would turn up little new evidence.

David Buchanan, association vice-president, said the U.S. national transportation safety board refused to reconsider its position on the possible cause of the sinking of the freighter.

The Edmund Fitzgerald sank in 530 feet of water in eastern Lake Superior near White Fish Bay during a violent storm on Nov. 10, 1975. All 29 men on board were lost.

Buchanan said the board refused to reconsider its position because there was insufficent evidence to back the association's contention that the Edmund Fitzgerald sank because of shoaling.

He said the association believes the shoaling caused a list and within three or four hours an undetected flood in the cargo hold caused loss of buoancy. When the ship went into a wave trough, it was unable to recover and sank.

But the board said the cause of the disaster was a sudden flooding of the cargo hold, caused by the collapse of one or more hatchcovers.

Rear-Admiral Paul Trimble, president of the association, said he felt the new submersible would have little effect on the association's position.

He said an unmanned submersible was used in May, 1976, to take photographs of the wreckage. Although silt already collected on the ship made some of the photographs unclear, Rear-Admiral Trimble said he felt they showed as much as they could.

He said silt which has collected since that time would make more photographs virtually useless.

Marching Women Get Guards' Goat

By PAUL WHITELAW
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A white flag is to be hoisted soon by the Canadian Forces, signalling the end to a ban against women taking part in the colorful changing-of-the-guard eremony on Parliament Hill.

The truce in the battle of the sexes will permit women — mostly college and university students — to begin marching alongside men in bearskin hats and scarlet tunics next summer.

Sources say the decision will be made public soon by Defence Minister Barney Danson.

However, the victory for women's rights has some officers and men of Governor-General's Foot Guards and the Canadian Grenadier Guards — the two regiments who have supplied the manpower for the ceremony — fighting mad.

The Ottawa-based Foot Guards and the Montreal-based Grenadiers are to be stripped of their traditional role in the ceremony, which is performed daily during the summer months to the delight of tourists.

Although the 200-or-so young people who march on the Hill are mostly students earning money to pay for their educations, the two regiments have taken pride in the fact that each of them has been required to take rigorous training as a combat infantryman at Camp Petawawa, Ont. They sign up as members of the militia.

However, the Canadian Forces bars women from serving as infantry or in other combat trades in either the reseryes or the regular forces.

To get around this restriction, sources say, the young people who perform the ceremony — including any women who apply and are accepted — will not take a regular infantryman's course. They will be schooled only in precision drill and take some physical education instruction to toughen them for the gruelling exercise of parading in bearskins and hot tunics under the summer sun.

The guards regiments don't want anything to do with what they view as a charade — a display by students who dress like soldiers but aren't infantrymen.

Therefore, the sources say, traditional ties with the two regiments will be severed and some other link to the Canadian Forces chain of command — still to be finalized — will be announced.

That proposed change has raised another touchy problem for Danson and the top brass.

Over drinks in their mess, the officers of the Foot Guards have been complaining that they don't want the students waring the regimental uniform if they aren't infantrymen.

But the brass realize that a changing-of-the guard uniform without bearskin hats and scarlet tunics just wouldn't impress the tourists. "The standard green Canadian forces uniform just wouldn't do," stated one source.

So, the uniforms will be altered slightly to remove regimental insignia while looking little different to the untrained eye.

That doesn't please the people who serve year-round in the reserves.

"Very ungentlemanly," states one officer, referring to the plan to dress the ceremonial soldiers in what will look very much like a guards uniform. "It's a matter of taste."

The attack on the all-made tradition of the changing-of-the-guard was spearheaded by Nathalie Bedard, a young Montreal woman who had her application to take part in the Parliament Hill ceremony rejected because of her sex.

She took her case to the Canadian Human Rights Commission, which is meeting behind closed doors in Ottawa to consider the complaint.

Sources say that whatever decision the Commission reaches — it might not be announced for some weeks — the Canadian Forces have decided that women should be allowed to parade on Parliament Hill and take part in a changing-of-the-guard ceremony at Rideau Hall, the governor-general's residence.

Danson will have more to say about the role of women in the Canadian Forces in a Winnipeg speech Jan. 29 to the Provincial Council of Women of Manitoba and the YWCA.

There is speculation the minister could announce that a number of military jobs now closed to women would be opened but that they would not be allowed to serve in combat roles. For instance, the ban against women as military pilots might be lifted although they would be restricted to transport aircraft.

A study of the role of women in the military was completed late last year and is now being studied by Danson and senior officers.

Some 'Wackos'?

NEW YORK (AP) — A city official says some of New York's 50,000 taxi drivers are "wackos" who have committed serious crimes. The official, who asked not to be identified, was commenting on a report by special city investigators which showed that 80 per cent of applicants for taxi licences have criminal records.

BARBECUE COULD BREAK BUDGET

By ALEX BINKLEY

OTTAWA (CP) — Backyard barbecuers better be ready to be culinary experimenters this summer because experts are predicting hamburger meat prices could rise like the smoke from the charcoal.

"The sky is the limit on hamburger prices," one market expert said.

The reason is a mixture of pressures facing cattlemen. Farmers are getting record or near-record prices for their cattle because of the decline in over-all cattle numbers and the drop in value of the Canadian dollar.

At the same time, they're constantly being told to start keeping cows and heifers which could be used for breeding to increase the total number of cattle. A greater supply of animals would help bring down beef prices.

But it's breeding cows which are the main source of ground beef. If farmers do as government and industry experts hope, there could be up to a 35-per-cent drop in marketings by summer.

That will lead to a scarcity of hamburger meat and the inevitable price increases. The Consumers Association of Canada has already predicted the cheapest ground beef could pass $2 a pound.

Demand for ground beef usually is greatest in the summer as the sun brings out the barbecues. To add to the woes of the backyard chefs is that high beef prices mean other meats will become more expensive.

Beef prices rose 50 per cent during 1978, an increase that caught most agricultural watchers by surprise.

The agriculture department predicted last month that choice steers would average about $65 a hundredweight in early 1979, rising to about $75 later in the year. The predictions were based on the dollar holding at just more than 85 cents American. It has dropped nearly one cent since then.

Toronto prices for top steers in the first two weeks of 1979 have equalled and surpassed last year's record high of $71 a hundredweight after being in the $65-a-hundredweight range for the last few months of 1978. Toronto prices are trend setters for the rest of the country.

Prices for lower grade cattle, the source of the ground beef used in hamburgers, ranged between $57 and $62 a hundredweight, double what farmers were receiving a year ago.

Agriculture officials and the Meat Packers Council aren't sure why the prices jumped so quickly after the New Year. It could be farmers holding back animals to put the income on their 1979 taxes, renewed public demand for beef after the holiday period or further declines in the value of the Canadian dollar.

Prices for cattle in the U.S. are high and show no sign of slipping even though Washington has authorized a five-per-cent increase in the amount of beef imports it will allow this year.

"It may be that we seriously underestimated public demand for beef even with the high prices. People just want to eat beef."

The experts say the high prices might be short-term. They also agree that markets in the first weeks of the new year are difficult to gauge. It will likely take until mid-February before definite trends can be determined.

Model T Full of History

BEAVERLODGE, Alta. (CP) — A rusty 1927 Model T Ford bounces through town once a year in the annual parade, looking to outsiders like just another old car but reminding the people of the southern Peace River country of their pioneering legacy.

The Model T is a survivor of one of the last great wilderness treks — the attempt 40 years ago by a couple of teenaged brothers and two friends to cross the Continental Divide through an area that is still wilderness.

They nearly made it and Jerry Stojan remembers it well.

He was 17 and his brother Charles 18 when they set out with Bruce Albright and Alec Watt on what would turn out to be a six-week adventure.

The people of the south Peace River country wanted a road across the Divide.

They thought one could be built through Monkman Pass, named after local trapper and explorer Alexander Monkman and one of the few easily crossed passes in the Rockies. It lies north of Jasper National Park, about 130 kilometres northeast of Prince George.

The Alberta government did not respond to repeated overtures so the local residents took the job in hand themselves.

They formed the Monkman Pass Association in 1937 and began raising money by holding dances, bake sales and other community activities.

Men and women working on their own time cut and blasted a trail from Beaverlodge along the Red Willow River to Kinuso Falls, B.C., just north of Monkman. By the late summer of 1938, a trail had been cut through the 1,000-metre pass.

On Sept. 1, 1938, the Stojan brothers, Albright and Watt left Beaverlodge in a picnic atmosphere and drove a car donated by the Stojans' father, Louis, into the wilderness. The community had decided to show the provincial government it was possible to drive through Monkman Pass.

The first 80 kilometres were covered in a few weeks and were relatively easy, Jerry Stojan, now 57, remembers.

The only rough spot was an area called Hell's Half Acre.

The bush thickened between Kinuso Falls and the pass and the men hacked their way along the community trail, fording endless creeks and crawling up and down hills.

They reached Monkman Pass in mid-October. They crossed it easily but it was snowing and for a week they had only dried moose meat and tapioca pudding to eat.

Three weeks and 25 kilometres later, on Nov. 10, they pulled up at the junction of the Herrick and McGregor rivers. They were 18 kilometres short of their goal, Hansard, B.C., on the Fraser River about 60 kilometres east of Prince George.

Olle Hanson was waiting at the river junction with his barge to take them the last short distance. It looked as if the four men had done it, but then near-tragedy struck.

They had to take apart the car to get it on the barge. One of the men cut a foot with an axe and suffered an infection, another developed pneumonia.

Hanson took the two sick men into Hansard for help. Before he could return the barge was stuck in ice.

At the river junction, the last two men took shelter in a trapper's cabin. A week later, short of food, they walked out to Hansard on snowshoes made from moosehide and willow saplings.

The four explorers returned to Alberta by train.

They had planned to return and finish hauling the Model T to Hansard the next year but the Second World War intervened.

The car sat at the river junction for 29 years until, in 1969, it was hauled out and taken back to Peace River country for reassembly.

There is still no roadway through the Monkman Pass.

Last year, a few modern adventurers tried to repeat the 1938 trek in a four-wheel drive vehicle.

They packed it in after a few days, Stojan said with a smile. "They never got anywhere."

Success Cited In Elm-III Fight

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg officials say the city's efforts to contain Dutch elm disease met with success last year.

The civic recreation and social services committee was told that only 52 trees died from the fungus in 1978.

City forester John Hreno said about 20,000 trees have been removed since 1976, and about 250,000 remain.

PCB Disposal Gets High Priority

REGINA (CP) — Saskatchewan is moving as fast as it can to implement a federal proposal for disposal of polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) at designated cement plants, Deputy Environment Minister Grant Mitchell said.

Mitchell was one of nine provincial deputy environment ministers who met in Toronto last week with federal officials to discuss plans to modify cement kilns for the safe, efficient burning of PCBs.

Mortgage-Profit Queries Rebuffed

EDMONTON (CP) — Mayor Cec Purves says he would like to know how much profit the provincial government is making on mortgage money loaned to some Edmonton homeowners but has been unable to find out.

Purves was reacting to a provincial cabinet minister's complaint that the city is making excessive profits on sales of lots.

Purves said at a city council meeting the city has yet to break even on its land holdings while the province is making a clear profit on the 10¾-per-cent mortgages it has issued.

EDMONTON (CP) — Cattle producers in the Manning area of Alberta's Peace River region will be eligible for government subsidies of up to $2,000 a farmer to help them bring in feed for the winter, Agriculture Minister Marvin Moore says.

Suspended Snake Back in School

BRANDON (CP) — Horton, a female boa constrictor, is being allowed to return to school.

Last September, Horton escaped from her cage in the lab at George Sitton school and was missing for nearly four weeks. As a result of the escape she was "expelled" and had to be taken home by science teacher Ken Pugh.

Blames Calgary Police For Theft Of Stereo

CALGARY (CP) — A city woman, who says police kicked her apartment door in during a drug raid and left it open for thieves to steal her stereo, wants compensation for the damage from either the city or the police.

Laura Cuthill, a cab driver, says she returned Jan. 6 from her Christmas vacation in Saskatchewan to find her door kicked in, a window smashed and everything turned upside down.

She said drawers were emptied on the floor, plants were dumped from their pots, dirt was strewn over her rug and dishes were smashed. Part of a bathroom ceiling was ripped out and left on the floor and a wall panel had been ripped off and was hanging from a few nails.

Cuthill said she was told by a city police sergeant it was unlikely that either the police or the city would be responsible for the damage to the apartment or the theft of the stereo which she valued at $1,000.

Inspector Don MacNeil, executive assistant to Chief Brian Sawyer, said a report filed on the incident shows police who carried out the raid had a search warrant and were looking for drugs.

No charges resulted from the raid.

Rail Action Body Offers Specifics

By PAUL WHITELAW
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The future of the Prairie rail network became a little clearer Tuesday with the release of a proposed master plan for rail line abandonment and track improvements.

The Prairie Rail Action Committee (PRAC) — set up by Transport Minister Otto Lang in May, 1977 — considered the fate of some 4,000 kilometres of branch lines and recommends that somewhat less than half should be modernized to permit efficient grain transportation.

PRAC, headed by Regina University professor F. A. Anderson, calls on the government to upgrade 1,670.7 kilometres of track and abandon another 1,265.8 kilometres.

To offset hardships for farming communities affected by the cutbacks in rail service, the committee recommends some $24 million in road improvements and trucking compensation to producers forced to haul grain more than 32 kilometres or 20 miles.

Farmers would be paid a subsidy of one cent per bushel per mile multiplied by the average annual total of delivered bushels of the last five years, a program that could cost some $6 million. It would apply to each mile of haulage in over the 20-mile limit.

PRAC was established to speed up decision-making about the future of some 4,000 kilometres of rail branch lines that the Hall Commission report on rail transportation, issued in May, 1977, said should be under continual assessment until 1990.

Lang concluded that another 13 years of uncertainty for the lines was unacceptable and set up the committee.

Lines recommended by PRAC for retention have already been transferred to what the federal transport department calls the "basic permanent network" of rail lines on the Prairies, according to a departmental announcement today. This track is to be rebuilt to first-class standard at a cost of $106 million as part of an eight-year $800 million rail upgrading program started in 1977.

Of some 30,700 kilometres of Prairie rail lines in existence before Mr. Justice Emmett Hall of the Saskatchewan Supreme Court began his study in 1974, more than 24,000 kilometres have now been transferred to the "basic permanent network." That is about 80 per cent of all track on the Prairies.

Final authority for accepting or rejecting the PRAC recommendations rests with the Canadian Transport Commission, to which anyone objecting to the proposals can appeal.

NUZZLING NORK-NORK, the solar-powered robot, is Terril MacInnes of Calgary. Nork-Nork travelled west from Winnipeg to help publicize the theme for this year's Calgary Stampede — solar energy. It is not known whether Terril received any energy tips during the get-acquainted session.

Lord Selkirk To Sail Again

WINNIPEG (CP) — The owners of the MS Lord Selkirk II cruise ship, once property of the Manitoba government, say they'll put the ship on Lake Winnipeg this summer in hopes of at least breaking even.

Brothers Harold and David Einarsson bought the financially-troubled craft about one year ago for $250,000 from the Conservative government. The ship, built nine years ago at a cost of $1.3 million, has not been used since the purchase was made.

The owners had considered dividing the ship into floating condominiums, or selling it outright as scrap, after a feasibility study predicted losses of $500,000 a year.

But at a press conference Monday, the brothers announced educational expeditions will be offered to high school students starting in June, at a cost of $1,700 per person in U.S. funds.

Students will be instructed in subjects like music, astrology, photography, water safety and first aid.

The expeditions are to consist of 20-day package tours.

Plans then call for the ship to go into regular service for five-day and two-day cruises in mid-July.

Tax Files: Refund for Most

RICH STILL GET BREAKS

VANCOUVER (CP) - Health Minister Monique Begin said Tuesday that too many parts of the tax system favor the rich and that one of the great challenges faced by governments is to make the system fairer.

The burden of taxes has been shifting onto the backs of individual taxpayers and away from corporations in the last 30 years, she told the Association of Professional Economists of British Columbia.

"Between 1951 and 1977 the share of federal revenues from direct taxes on corporations has been cut in half, from 30 per cent to 15 per cent. The slack has been taken up by direct taxes on individuals, whose share has almost doubled from 28 per cent to 49 per cent."

But complaints that the country has been bled dry for expenditures on social programs are unfounded, the minister said.

Despite an increase in the number of social programs, the income distribution has remained the same since the Second World War.

Among those suffering the most are the elderly, the minister said.

By CAROL GOAR
Canadian Press

OTTAWA — Three out of every four Canadians who file income tax returns get refunds, the revenue department says.

Last year approximately 10 million of 12.6 million taxpayers received refunds averaging $309.

This is one of the findings in a 63-page booklet released Tuesday to explain the taxation system.

Called Inside Taxation, it shows that the government collected $34.3 billion in income taxes last year of which $4 billion was refunded.

It costs the government $1.20 to collect every $100 and the average amount of tax revenue collected every working day of the 1977-78 taxation year was $137 million.

The booklet, released by Revenue Minister Tony Abbott to prepare taxpayers for filing their 1978 returns shows total collections have increased from $12.5 million in 1917 when income taxes were initiated.

Last year 500,000 taxpayers failed to supply the necessary information with their tax returns and 72,000 were late filing and were fined a total of $2.5 million.

Most taxpayers complete their own returns. Last year 3.5 million people used the services of an accountant lawyer or other paid professional — about one quarter of the taxpaying public.

Doctors and surgeons paid the highest taxes — an average federal tax of $11,386 — with lawyers second at $10,619. Dentists paid an average $9,907, engineers and architects $9,140 and accountants $7,473.

Occupations further down the rankings included teachers at an average $2,224, farmers at $1,649, federal employees at $1,752 and entertainers and artists at $1,184.

The department keeps close watch on certain occupational groups.

Included in such high risk groups are those with significant sources of income outside their regular wage or salary — waiters and waitresses, business executives, salesmen and saleswomen and self-employed taxpayers.

No Red Carpet for Rene

WASHINGTON (FP) — A Canadian Embassy official said here Tuesday that the embassy has not been asked to provide any assistance to Quebec premier Rene Levesque when he visits the U.S. capital next week.

"We haven't been asked to provide any ground transportation or assistance in getting accommodation, or anything like that," the spokesman said.

Even though the Quebec premier's visit is strictly a "private" affair, the embassy as a courtesy usually is asked and provides whatever assistance it can to provincial politicians on unofficial visits.

The main purpose of Levesque's visit to Washington is to speak to the National Press Club and to deliver an address at Georgetown University.

What is Decency? Judge Delays Ruling

TORONTO (UPC) - Saying there was little indication of what contemporary Canadian standards of decency are, a provincial court judge has deferred his decision in the morals trial of a homosexual publication.

Judge Sydney Harris put off judgement until "at least" Feb. 14 after final arguments Tuesday in the trial of the gay liberation journal Body Politic.

Three Body Politic staffers were charged after the magazine published an article in December 1977 on sexual relations between men and boys. The story featured interviews with admitted pedophiles, one of whom claimed to have had an eight-year-old boy as a lover.

The three were charged with using the mails for "immoral, indecent, or scurrilous" purposes.

Harris repeatedly interrupted defence summations to complain there was little evidence to help him determine whether the defendants violated public standards of morality and decency.

"All I'm saying is I'm supposed to be in a position to know what the national standards of morals and decency are," Harris said. "I wish I had omniscience, but I don't."

Crown attorney Jerome Wylie said the article advocated sexual relations between adults and children, a practice "obviously offensive to the contemporary Judeo-Christian traditions."

Wylie called the article "a subtle attempt to recruit" and said it advocated at least two criminal offences — gross indecency and indecent assault.

Harris said that despite testimony from a host of experts, "I'm not certain I can draw the conclusion that specialists and theologians represent a cross-section of public opinion."

Frost Claims Hand

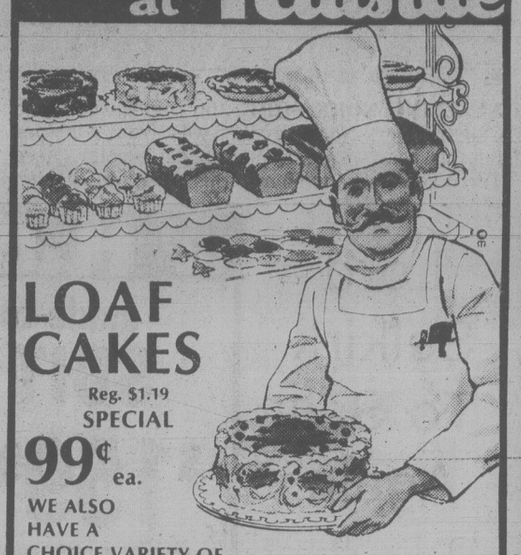

EDMONTON (CP) — Donald Butters, son of Northwest Territories economics minister, has had his left hand amputated because of frostbite.

Donald, 20, son of Tom Butters, was found Dec. 28 lying on a road in Inuvik, N.W.T., in -40 temperatures.

Doctors thought Donald was dead when he was brought to Inuvik Hospital with a body temperature so low it would not register on hospital thermometers.

Donald, a second-year political science student, had returned to Inuvik for Christmas and gone to a party with his sister and twin brother the night of Dec. 27.

Will Pierre Quit If Liberals Lose?

By RON CLINGEN
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Fears that Prime Minister Trudeau may try to cling to power even after losing the expected spring election were raised in Winnipeg Tuesday night by Opposition House Leader Walter Baker.

"It may seem ridiculous that a political leader in a democratic country would manipulate the constitution to remain in office after losing an election, but strange things have happened in the last 10 years," Baker said.

He wondered — in a speech to a constituency association — whether Trudeau may try to avoid quitting, particularly if the Liberals should lose by a narrow margin.

"Not only does Mr. Trudeau not want to admit defeat, but all the political advisers around him will have a vested interest in urging him to stay on and meet Parliament," Baker observed.

The crucial question at that point, he reasoned, will be the New Democratic Party's response.

Baker urged Canadians to begin asking the NDP whether it will form "a tacit coalition" as it did with the Trudeau minority government in 1972, or "recognize the democratic will of the people" and refuse to support Trudeau again.

Baker is not sure that Trudeau would resign if his party's seat total was lower than the Conservatives, if his popular vote was lower, or only if both were lower — or "even then."

The Tory House leader predicted his party will emerge from "one of the closest, hottest election battles in Canadian history" with a small majority.

Perhaps its greatest task then, he suggested, will be to undo all the damage caused by the "shortsighted and opportunistic policies" of the Trudeau government.

Baker discounted what he called the "scare story spread by the Liberals' that a new Conservative government would immediately begin "a great slaughter of public servants."

He explained that reduction would be carried out by attrition in a effort to help boost the "efficiency and morale" of the public service.

He said the degree to which the present government has "politicized" the public service would determine whether many senior public servants would be dismissed for political reasons.

"Most senior public servants are able to properly serve their ministers without becoming political aides," Baker said. "Those who have succumbed will not feel comfortable with us and will wish to move on."

He said those who have been parachuted into senior positions directly from Liberal ranks would find themselves in similarly vulnerable positions.

"It is a bit much to suggest, for example, that a Conservative government would have been as quick to see in Bryce Mackasey the makings of a senior airline executive as were his former colleagues," the Tory House leader noted.

Mackasey, the former Trudeau cabinet minister who lost an attempted political comeback in a byelection in Ottawa Centre last October, has been named chairman of Air Canada.

Baker cautioned that his party has no intention of "throwing away experienced professional advice on a partisan whim."

Senior Servant Exodus Foretold

WINNIPEG (CP) — Many senior public servants appointed by the Liberals will want to seek other employment if the Progressive Conservatives form the next government, Walter Baker, Conservative House leader, said Tuesday.

"Most senior public servants are able to properly serve their ministers without becoming political aides," Baker said in a speech prepared for a Conservative party gathering.

"Those who have succumbed will not feel comfortable with us and will wish to move on."

Baker, MP for the Ottawa area riding of Grenville-Carleton in which many public servants live, cited the recent appointment of Bryce Mackasey, former Liberal cabinet minister, as Air Canada chairman.

"It is a bit much to suggest . . . that a Conservative government would have been as quick to see in Bryce Mackasey the makings of a senior airline executive as were his former colleagues."

Baker also commented on the Conservatives' intention to reduce the public service by 60,000 jobs through attrition in three years.

"I believe this is necessary for a variety of reasons, including the efficiency and morale of the public service itself," Baker said.

GORDON
. . . solid research

Economic Answers Sought

OTTAWA (CP) — Former Liberal finance minister and well-known nationalist Walter Gordon said Tuesday more than $300,000 a year will be spent by a new institute he heads to promote policies to make the country more self-reliant in solving its economic problems.

Gordon, a founder of the Committee for an Independent Canada (CIC) a decade ago, said the new Canadian Institute for Economic Policy, of which he is the first chairman, will pay experts to produce "some pretty solid, scholarly research" on economic issues facing the country.

John Shepherd, vice-chairman of the Science Council of Canada, and president of the new institute, said its aim is to encourage self-reliance and strength for Canada in in the face of tough international competition.

He said the institute would pay experts to write at least six reports a year over the next four to five years.

Gordon told a news conference the institute is "not an offshoot of the CIC," which has publicized the extent of foreign ownership in Canada. But it will examine solutions to the country's economic problems which avoid still further integration of the Canadian and U.S. economies.

"Our view is that we need some new ideas," he said. "The old ones don't seem to be working that well."

The institute is to release a report within a few months outlining what it considers the important economic issues facing the country.

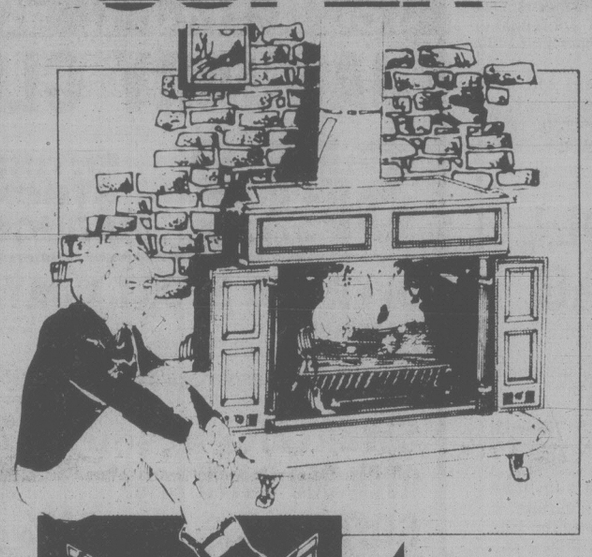

Already underway and expected to be completed by summer are studies on the Bank of Canada's monetary policies, a study on the Canadian balance of payments problems and one on energy policy.

Gordon declined to reveal the names of all contributors to the institute, saying some donations had been made on condition the name of the donor not be made public.

But he said Molson's Breweries had donated as had Brascan Ltd.

It's Brown for a Girl, Green for a Boy

TORONTO (CP) — A Winnipeg doctor says a test using a commercial drain cleaner can determine the sex of unborn babies.

Dr. Sidney Nelko said the Drano test — which he heard about from a patient who heard about it from a friend's milkman — correctly predicted the sex of four out of five babies he delivered last year.

"I think it's just fantastic, it's just wild," he said. "It was never supposed to be serious, but it's become serious and still is fun."

A pregnant woman can determine the sex of her unborn child by mixing two teaspoons of liquid Drano with two teaspoons of her morning urine, Nelko said. If the solution turns brown or golden in color, it will be a girl. If it turns green, it will be a boy.

The test works best during the last three months of pregnancy, said Nelko, who has no idea why it works. If the color doesn't show clearly, he suggests adding equal amounts of urine and Drano.

Walter Huculak, a chemist at Bristol-Myers Canada Ltd., makers of Drano, said the drain cleaner is a strong alkaline material consisting of a solution of liquid lye and a color dye. He could not explain Nelko's tests, however.

Dr. Patrick Hewlett, a gynecologist and obstetrician at Women's College Hospital, said he'd be pleased if the Drano test works. "Drano is cheap and urine is not hard to get," he said.

Farewells for Schreyer

WINNIPEG (UPC) — A damp-eyed Ed Schreyer bid 250 well-wishers goodbye, inspected his official portrait, and left Manitoba politics Tuesday to begin his term as Canada's governor-general.

"Wherever in Canada I may serve in future . . . I will always think of Manitoba as my home," he said. "It is home, after all — the centre of Canada."

Schreyer was saying farewell to the Manitoba legislature, where he spent 16 of his 21 years in politics — eight of them as premier.

At the reception were MLAs and federal MPs present and past and their wives, Lt.-Gov. F.L. Jobin, legislative staff, and press gallery members.

It was also the occasion for the unveiling of Schreyer's official portrait, painted in 1974 by Vancouver artist Joyce Devlin. It depicts a serious likeness among pink-purple skies and the prairies, rocks and rivers that symbolize Manitoba's resources.

Schreyer said Manitoba's brand of politics is "a very civilized political democracy — and for that we should be very grateful."

And, he added, "It is a privilege to have the opportunity to serve one's fellow citizens for even one term. To be able to serve for several terms a privilege I will always bear in mind."

Premier Sterling Lyon noted that Schreyer's portrait would remain in a committee room where the former premiers' likenesses are kept.

The premier, obviously remembering some of the more heated debates of the past, said facetiously that his predecessor would be gazing down "with the same benign and friendly eyes that we have known in the past."

And, he added, "We'll be watching you, too."

Schreyer is to be sworn in as Canada's Governor-General at a ceremony in Ottawa on Tuesday.

PM Gives Adieus To Gov.-Gen.Leger

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau was 10 minutes late Tuesday for his final weekly meeting with Gov.-Gen. Jules Leger.

As Trudeau hurried down the red-carpeted hallways of Rideau Hall, the vice-regal residence, he smoothed his hair with his hands and lamented, "I don't have a comb."

He caught a peek of the controversial new painting of Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip hanging in the Rideau Hall ballroom but made no comment on it.

Upon leaving the Governor-General's study after the 35-minute private meeting, Trudeau declined photographers' requests to pose in front of the massive portrait which former prime minister John Diefenbaker says is disrepectful to the monarchy.

"He (Trudeau) will see it Wednesday night," a Leger aide said, referring to the Governor-General's farewell ball.

The Legers leave Sunday to visit the Queen in London. Ed Schreyer will be installed as Governor-General Monday.

THUNDER ROLLS AROUND LAB

TORONTO (CP) — A university professor is creating indoor thunder in a Toronto laboratory.

H. S. Ribner, a University of Toronto professor, said he is manufacturing thunder to satisfy his curiosity.

Ribner is a former official of the U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration and an authority on jet noise and sonic booms.

At a special laboratory of the university's Institute for Aerospace Studies, Ribner uses a photograph of lightning, sophisticated mathematics, a computer and amplifiers to create ominous-sounding rumbles and rolls.

The photograph was divided into sections and a computer used to determine the characteristics of the overlapping sound waves the bolt would produce. The waves are fed into electrical signals and fed into amplifiers.

"Lightning is much thinner than it looks," said Ribner. "In fact, it's not much thicker than a lead pencil."

The glow obscures the structure of the bolt, which can determine the type of thunder produced.

"We know that a straight flash of lightning causes only a sharp crack and a real jagged one causes rumbles and rolls."

He says lightning can be regarded as millions of explosions strung along a crooked line. The explosions occur simultaneously but thunder lasts a long time because sounds from various parts of the line arrive at the ear at different times.

The sound signals overlap creating a complicated pattern which we perceive as thunder.

Most thunder comes from cloud-to-cloud lightning, which travels up to 20 kilometres. Cloud-to-ground lightning averages about six kilometres.

Pipeline Report

OTTAWA (UPC) — An environmental impact statement on the Yukon section of the proposed Alaska Highway Gas Pipeline project has been completed and is being distributed for public comment, the Federal Environmental Assessment Review Office announced Tuesday.

The statement, drawn up by Foothills Pipe Line Ltd., will be discussed at public meetings in various Yukon communities, including those along the proposed pipeline route, and Whitehorse, the federal agency said.

First Bank Strike Likely

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada's first legal strike of bank employees may be just around the corner.

The 950 unionized workers of the City and District Savings Bank — a Montreal company with 112 branches in the area — say they are seriously considering strike action to back their wage demand.

The last impediment to a strike was cleared Tuesday when Labor Minister Martin O'Connell informed the parties he won't appoint a conciliation commissioner, making a strike or lockout legal Jan. 24.

The workers, members of the Office and Professional Employees International Union (OPEIU), won't decide for another few days what course of action to adopt. Protest action "up to and including a full strike" is a virtual certainty, said union president Yvon Rivard.

If they strike, the bank hopes to maintain basic service at some branches by using its 400 non-union employees.

A walkout by City and District employees, organized 12 years ago, may have a psychological impact on the drive to organize workers at the 11 major charter banks.

"I'm sure the banks are going to use this strike, if there is one, to tell bank workers that unions are strike happy," said Laraine Singler, head of the Canadian Labor Congress drive to unionize banks.

"The fact that the union has been at the City and District for 12 years with no strikes and no disruptions will be conveniently forgotten."

So far, only 1,000 employees, or one per cent of the more than 100,000 potential members working for the major chartered banks have joined a union, said the CLC official.

Since June, 1977, when the Canadian Labor Relations Board ruled that a bank branch is an appropriate bargaining unit, opening the way for more union activity in the industry, only 53 branches have been organized.

To keep unions out, the banks are trying to appease employees, Ms. Singler said. Most workers will get nine-per-cent wage increases this year — more than they would get in most other industries — and other fringe-benefit improvements.

And several banks are experimenting with informal grievance mechanisms for airing employee gripes, she added.

The OPEIU organized the City and District in 1967 by signing a majority of employees across the company. That was a one-shot deal which couldn't be repeated at a major national bank simply because of their size, said Ms. Singler.

Wages are the only item in the City and District dispute. The workers signed a two-year agreement in January, 1978, calling for wages in the second year to be negotiated this winter.

Rivard, a pre-loans officer at City and District headquarters, says his members were the best paid in the industry until the recent increases at the big banks.

They have rejected an 8½-per-cent increase and are holding out for 13. The average weekly salary at the City and District is $199.14, Rivard said.

Meanwhile, about 400 union members paraded around headquarters Tuesday afternoon calling on management to meet their demand.

Extra Sentence Given Killers

BRANDON, Man. (UPC) — Convicted murderers Herbert Archer and his wife, Dorothy, have been jailed for 12 and 10 years respectively on their convictions for kidnapping and unlawful confinement.

The two already are serving life sentences for shooting to death RCMP Constable Dennis Onofrey a year ago next Tuesday in Virden, 50 miles west of Brandon. They pleaded guilty to the latest charges.

Provincial court Judge John Hunt, who sentenced the pair Tuesday, ordered the terms to be served concurrently with their first degree murder sentences, which were passed Dec. 9.

Both Archers have appealed the murder convictions on a variety of grounds — including the judge's in-trial reference to Bonnie and Clyde, notorious gangsters in the 1930s.

During that trial, testimony of 62 Crown witnesses indicated Onofrey was killed and two other RCMP officers wounded during a shoot-out with the Archers at a Virden motel, where police were investigating a report of a stolen van.

The Archers made their getaway in a police cruiser and later kidnapped Dave Penny, Virden's town clerk.

Bikini Girl Makes Threat of Suicide

SYDNEY, Australia — An 18-year-old Russian girl who wriggled through a porthole clad only in a red bikini to defect from a Soviet ship has vowed to kill herself if immigration officials force her to return to her native land. "Please let me stay," Lillian Gasinskayova pleaded in an interview with the Daily Mirror published today. "I'll kill myself if they try to send me home," she said. "I don't want to go back to Russia."

Travolta

Vicious

NEW YORK — British punk rock music star Sid Vicious was ordered freed on $50,000 bail Tuesday after his lawyer told the court that the woman he is accused of murdering may have committed suicide. But the 21-year-old Vicious, who is charged with stabbing death last October of his girl-friend Nancy Spungen, was ordered returned to jail until the money was raised. Vicious, dressed in rumpled clothing, smiled broadly when the judge granted him bail. However, his lawyer said it would take several days before the bail could be raised because the money had to come from Britain.

JACKSON, Wyo. - When Mike and Gerri Schneider stopped outside of town to haul a car from a snowdrift, they little dreamed they'd catch their own private case of Saturday Night Fever. Who should emerge from the marooned vehicle but John Travolta. He was in the area — hiding under a ski mask — for an incognito schuss down the slopes at nearby Jackson Hole. Travolta proved his gratitude by buying steaks, which his manager cooked at a nearby cabin owned by a friend of the Schneiders. Says Mrs. Schneider, "It was fantastic, just fantastic. He is a very nice person." She adds she's been a Travolta fan ever since his first movie — says "What red-blooded American girl isn't?"

LOS ANGELES - John Wayne — living the tough-guy role he's played so often — is recuperating from surgery faster than his doctors dreamed he would, and a couple of high-powered fans are cheering him on. Jimmy Carter and Richard Nixon have both called the UCLA medical centre to relay best wishes. Nixon's call wasn't put through because Wayne still was in intensive care. But the 71-year-old "Duke," whose cancerous stomach was removed Friday, was released later in the day and Tuesday he swallowed his first food since the operation, taking small sips of liquid a day earlier than doctors had expected. A hospital spokeswoman says X-rays show he's healing early.

STOCKHOLM - It didn't work for Sonny and Cher, but the record company that distributes albums by superstar pop group ABBA is hoping it will work for Agnetha Faltskog and Bjorn Ulvaeus. They're two of the quartet that hit the top of the charts worldwide with Waterloo — and they're getting a divorce. ABBA's record company says it's an "amicable" separation — that they'll go right on working together.

VANCOUVER — Rita LeGault of North Vancouver, is an ideal advertisement for not smoking. Two years ago, Mrs. LeGault, 71, quit smoking and began spending her cigarette money on lottery tickets. She has won three times since then, including $100,000 in last Wednesday's Western Express draw. Mrs. LeGault said she would take several days before deciding what to do with the money.

Marvin Thought He Was Marvel

LOS ANGELES (CP) — Michelle Triola Marvin told a court Tuesday that film tough guy Lee Marvin apparently thought he was comic book hero Captain Marvel.

Miss Marvin was testifying in support of her claim that she is entitled to financial remuneration for the love and devotion she gave to Marvin during the years they lived together.

Miss Marvin was questioned by her lawyer, Marvin Mitchelson, about a letter she said Marvin wrote to her which said "Captain Marvel saved the day."

Asked by Mitchelson, "Who is Captain Marvel?" Miss Marvin looked across at Marvin and said, "I believe that is who he thinks he is."

Miss Marvin said Marvin had told her he wanted to spend his life with her and she believed this.

She identified one letter introduced as evidence in which she said Marvin had written to her from London in 1966, while he was making the film The Dirty Dozen, in which he said if she was not in London by July 15 she should "forget it, forget the relationship."

She said she went to London and when she returned to their beach home at Malibu, Calif., Marvin told her her singing career was "getting impossible."

"He said I would have to decide if I wanted to sing or be with him," she said.

Finally, a Gripping Actor's Story

Scott's World

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

HOLLYWOOD — Charlton Heston is an extraordinarily private man by movie star standards despite the fact he has written a best-selling day-to-day account of his work and play in The Actor's Life.

After reading this lengthy, detailed and intimate account of his life the reader is left curiously ignorant of Heston's true political persuasion, religious tenets and emotional responses.

The fun of reading The Actor's Life is piecing together Heston's thoughts, linking the mosaic of his responses to situations and persons to compose a complete portrait of the elusive man himself.

He is a complex man who doesn't advertise his complexities. He is, by nature, serious, uncomfortable in the face of frivolity. He appears ill at ease among strangers and at social functions.

Heston's book is a compilation, refinement and tightly edited volume of his personal journals from 1956 to 1976, a 20-year span of the man's growth as an actor, husband and father.

He shares the pangs of failure and the thrill of triumphs in his films and plays.

"I really can't say why I started keeping a daily journal in 1956," he said. "I wish I had begun at the beginning of my career. Or perhaps with my first play or movie.

"I wrote the journals — a hundred words or so every night — as a work tool. In 1956 I'd already played Moses in The Ten Commandments and it was clear that my career would have some kind of permanence.

"So the journals are an account of my professional encounters and opinions to help organize my thinking. I often refer to the journals in making decisions about writers, directors and other actors."

Heston was prevailed upon by writer Hollis Alpert and the Dutton publishing house two years ago to organize the journals into a book.

He was reluctant at first. His diaries weren't an autobiography. Neither were they gossipy or an insider's revelation of Hollywood's social life.

But Heston's meticulous account of his day-to-day work in each of his movies is unique. The Actor's Life is the only book which tells how motion pictures are really made — the technical aspects of filmmaking plus the relationships among actors, crew, craftsmen and financial manipulators.

"I agreed to do the work with the understanding that no one would write a single word except me," Heston said, "including footnotes, editing and connecting material. I insisted on cleaning up the syntax as well.

"I began working with Alpert in January of 1977, sending him the edited version of the journals — a year's worth at a time. He'd make additional cuts and suggestions and then I'd write a second draft.

"All told, it took 15 months of on-again off-again editing to put the book together. During that time I made a movie, Gray Lady Down and did Macbeth on stage at the Los Angeles Music Centre."

Published last November, The Actor's Life — which sells for $12.95 — is now in its third printing and has sold upwards of 85,000 copies.

Heston is delighted by its success and surprised that his journals have turned an enormous profit, even before foreign sales and paperback publication.

"The book tells more about how I feel about my work than I normally go into," the actor said. "I don't think it is very revelatory of my personal life except in my relationships with Lydia (Mrs. Heston) and Fraser and Holly (his kids).

"The book was an interesting experience and its success has been a crucial event for me. I travelled to 20 cities in five weeks to promote it.

"Why was its success important? Because during my career as an actor if a play or a film did not succeed, I knew there would always be another play or movie. But this is the only book I'll ever write. I wanted it to be successful."

Medieval Buffet Set To Aid Belfry Cause

How delicious it is!

The thought of feasting at a superb buffet and at the same time helping a favorite cause.

And more — enjoying a generous portion of classy entertainment.

When does all this come about?

On Sunday at The Belfry Theatre when the Mediaeval Inn will host a gala buffet feast as a Belfry benefit event. In addition to a lavish array of dishes in the best Mediaeval Inn tradition, entertainment will feature Dan Costain, Sheila McCarthy, Louise Rose, Peter Chipman, Ken MacDonald, the Inn's own popular Irish Mist and Brent Carver from Vancouver.

So highly does The Belfry rate with many Victorians, that Michael and Suzanne Marchant, owner-managers of the Mediaeval Inn, had no difficulty in enlisting the voluntary support of their staff when they offered to stage the benefit buffet.

The Belfry, faced with the threat of having to close its doors after government financial assistance was cut back or eliminated, has found a heartening number of friends in the community rallying to its support.

"When we approached our staff they responded most enthusiastically," say the Marchants.

"In fact everyone we have talked to has been more than willing to help out — even to the printing for the benefit which has been donated by Foto-Print.

The Buffet-Feast beings at 5 p.m. with the buffet being served from 6 to 8 p.m. and entertainment continuing to 9:30.

Tickets are $15, tax-deductible, and may be purchased at The Belfry and Mediaeval Inn. Information and reservations can be obtained by calling 385-6815.

Dederich Wheeled Into Los Angeles Court

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Synanon founder Charles Dederich, a once vigorous and dynamic man brought in a wheelchair to face arraignment on charges of conspiracy to murder a lawyer with a rattlesnake, told the judge he had "lost track" of his case.

Except for two brief remarks, Dederich, 65, sat silently Tuesday as his attorney entered a plea of innocent to charges of conspiracy and solicitation to commit murder.

Flown to Los Angeles Tuesday after his lawyers gave up a six-week fight against extradition from Arizona, Dederich was released after posting $100,000 cash bond, and he reportedly returned to a Synanon-owned ranch at Badger, Calif.

Dederich — described by his lawyers and family as so shattered and depressed by his problems that they fear he may die — looked straight ahead and showed no emotion as the judge read the charges against him.

When a prosecutor asked him to declare personally, not through his lawyers, that he understood he was waiving his right to resist extradition, Dederich replied:

"I lost track of this proceeding a long time ago."

"Do you waive?" the prosecutor persisted.

After his attorney, Dan Garrett, whispered in his ear, Dederich replied "Yes."

Under that agreement worked out in Arizona the day before — that Dederich renounces his right to fight extradition if he leaves California and must be re-arrested — the judge freed him on bail, posted with a $100,000 bank certificate of deposit.

The judge also set Feb. 20 for a preliminary hearing — when prosecutors said they hope to join his case to that of Lance Kenton and Paul A. Musico Jr., two Synanon members accused of placing a 4 ½-foot rattlesnake in the mailbox of attorney Paul Morantz.

"When Dederich's attorneys finally gave up the fight on extradition, it greatly increased the chances of our putting them all on trial together," said prosecutor John Watson.

Morantz, a legal opponent of Synanon, was bitten on the hand Oct. 10 but recovered.

POPE JOHN PAUL II

RC, Orthodox Talks

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope John Paul II announced today that new talks are about to begin between the Roman Catholic and Orthodox churches toward repairing a thousand-year split.

Speaking to an audience of 20,000 in St. Peters Basilica and the Vatican audience hall during his weekly general audience, the 58-year-old pontiff also said that in talks also with Anglican, Lutheran, Methodist and Reform church representatives there had been "cheering points of convergence."

But he added immediately: "The road is still long, however. We must therefore speed up the pace to reach the goal so desired."

The Polish pope, speaking prior to Thursday's start of Christian Unity Week, said: "I want to tell you that a theological dialogue is about to begin between the Catholic and Orthodox churches of the Byzantine tradition with a view to eliminating those difficulties that still prevent eucharistic concelebration."

The split between the two churches began in 1054 when the pope in Rome and the Patriarch of the Orient in Constantinople (Istanbul) mutually excommunicated each other.

The excommunications were lifted in 1965 and, 10 years later, during a ceremony in the Sistine Chapel, Pope Paul VI fell to his knees before Metropolitan Meliton of Constaninople and kissed his feet in a supreme ecumenical gesture.

The principal point of difference remaining between the church of Rome and other Christian churches is the papal claim of primacy in theological matters.

Swindled Art World, Toronto Woman Says

LONDON (CP) — Jane Maurice, now a Toronto housewife, has admitted five charges of obtaining money by false prtences and will be sentenced by an Old Bailey judge later.

The court was told that the woman, a convent-educated girl, fell under the spell of a "Svengali-like" artist 30 years her senior and hoodwinked the art world by selling his faked paintings for £20,700 ($50,000).

Jane Maurice, previously known as, Jane Kelly, returned from Toronto to Britain to face the charges. Involved also was British artist Tom Keating, who also was a picture restorer.

Her lawyer, George Shindler, told the court that the 32-year-old woman had "laid to rest the humbug and hypocrisy in which she had been involved."

James Miskin, the recorder of London, refused Shindler's plea that Mrs. Maurice be sentenced immediately.

Miskin said he would pass sentence at the end of the Keating trial to open Thursday.

Mrs. Maurice is reported willing to give Crown evidence.

Mrs. Maurice has admitted five charges of obtaining money by false pretences concerning paintings represented as the work of the 19th-century artists Samuel Palmer and Cornelius Krieghoff.

The recorder said: "I decline to sentence Mrs. Maurice until after the trial has concluded and the jury has returned its verdict. In this case, it may be in her very best interests."

David Tudor Price, prosecuting, said that in 1964 Mrs. Maurice met the picture restorer while living with her parents.

In 1967 Keating, then 50, and Kelly, then 21, moved to Norfolk, where they established a picture-restoration business and lived together.

Mrs. Maurice is alleged to have told art dealers that paintings she had for sale came from a collection her grandfather had accumulated in Ceylon.

Film Director Dies

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Alexander Stolper, one of the Soviet Union's best known film directors, has died at the age of 71, Tass news agency reported Monday.

DISPUTE COOLS

BUENOS AIRES (Reuter) — Argentina will start pulling troops back from the Chilean frontier after the Pope agrees to mediate in a territorial dispute which almost caused war last month, sources said Tuesday.

The dispute is over three small islands at the southern tip of the Americas, and related maritime rights.

Both countries mobilized troops and warships to the zone after talks aimed at a settlement broke down.

POWER LINE DAMAGE $5M

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Spokesmen for the two utilities serving the Portland area say the cost to repair power lines damaged in last week's severe ice storm could exceed $5 million.

Bruce Landrey of Portland General Electric Co. (PGE) said repair costs are estimated at from $2 million to $4 million.

Glenn Gillespie of Pacific Power £ Light Co. (PP£L) said costs would exceed $1 million, but exact figures won't be available for several weeks.

Landrey said PGE ratepayers would not have to pay for the repairs, but Gillespie said PP£L customers may have to pay a small amount for the repair work.

"The impact on ratepayers will not be a major one," Gillespie said. "It's diluted and the over-all effect won't be a whole lot."

The official figure on the number of outages at the peak of last week's storm continued to rise. A total of 175,000 customers were without power last Wednesday night.

About 200 PP£L customers were still without electricity Tuesday, but Gillespie said their power should be restored by Tuesday night.

Crews from throughout Oregon and Washington came to the Portland area to repair the damage.

'Forged' CIA Paper Found

WASHINGTON (UPI) — American officials have described what they say is a worldwide Soviet KGB "disinformation" campaign designed to damage U.S. relations with its allies in Europe and the Far East with a forged document.

The KGB circulated a "Top Secret" U.S. Army document purporting to have been issued March 19, 1970, by Gen. William Westmoreland, then Army chief of staff, concerning "stability operations" in countries where U.S. Army units are stationed. The American officials say it was forged.

It professed to recommend infiltrating U.S. Army intelligence agents into the armed forces of host countries and also into insurgent forces and extreme radical groups.

And the bogus document instructed Army intelligence to be prepared to launch special operations against host countries if that proved to be in the over-all U.S. interest.

Covert Action Information Bulletin, an anti-establishment publication which has revealed the names of CIA agents using diplomatic cover abroad, published the "Top Secret Supplement B" to Army Field Manual 30-31 in its latest edition.

It claimed the document was authentic and had been published already in Turkish, Spanish, Italian, Dutch and North African newspapers and periodicals.

"A forgery," a Pentagon spokesman told UPI Tuesday, while conceding that some parts were "sophisticated." A House Intelligence Committee spokesman said the panel is looking into the matter and is in contact with the Defence Department and the CIA concerning it. An intelligence source called the directive clearly a "disinformation product" of Soviet KGB intelligence.

Full Jonestown Probe

GEORGETOWN (AP) — The Guyanese government said Tuesday it will open a public inquiry into the "entire Jonestown tragedy."

A cabinet spokesman said President Arthur Chung will appoint the commission which will be headed by a person with a judicial background.

The announcement came after an all-day cabinet meeting and followed weeks of mounting demands from opponents of Prime Minister Forbes Burnham for an impartial investigation.

Burnham's opponents have said that cult leader Jim Jones operated a state within a state, was allowed to bring in guns illegally and the government failed to act despite reports of suicide rehearsals and torture at Jonestown.

CPI WITHDRAWS MAC-BLO OFFER

MONTREAL (UPC) — Canadian Pacific Investments Ltd., bowing to opposition from Premier Bill Bennett, today withdrew its takeover bid for MacMillan-Bloedel, Ltd., Canada's largest forest products company.

CPI board chairman Ian D. Sinclair made the announcement following a meeting of the CPI board of directors.

Sinclair expressed "regret" the CPI bid had been turned down by the M-B board of directors as well as drawing fire from Bennett, who vigorously opposed any transfer of control of the Vancouver-based company out of British Columbia.

"The board of directors has decided to meet the request of Premier Bennett concerning its offer for the shares of MacMillan-Bloedel it does not already own," Sinclair said in a prepared statement.

"Accordingly the offer will not be made at this time."

Sinclair noted Bennett's pledge that his province was "not for sale" and would fight any effort by a non-B.C. based group to take over Mac-Blo.

The CPI board, he said, "noted that at present less than 20 per cent of its (Mac-Blo's) shares are registered in the names of British Columbians."

STARVATION DEATHS FEARED

Strike Strangling U.K.

LONDON (Reuter) — Strike-battered Britain has been warned that all food factories could close down next week and there is a danger of old people starving to death.

Prime Minister James Callaghan called in trade union chiefs and appeared close to declaring a state of emergency to handle the mounting industrial crisis.

In a letter to Callaghan, the Food Manufacturers Federation said only 10 per cent of raw materials was reaching its factories because of a truck drivers' strike.

Federation President Derrick Hornby told a news conference that Britain's entire food-manufacturing industry may shut next week, with 600,000 workers laid off.

Hornby, whose federation represents 350 of the country's biggest food manufacturers, said he had not spoken out before for fear of alarming the public.

Old age pensioners, the disabled and people who could not afford to stock up with emergency provisions would suffer most — "I believe old people could easily go hungry and starve," he said.

With supply lines strangled by strike pickets, the cabinet today will "seriously consider" a state of emergency to ensure the continued flow of essential goods, a highly-placed official said.

Callaghan appealed to the trade unions Wednesday to save his Labor government from being sunk by anti-union feeling in this year's elections.

Ignoring the advice of union leaders, most of the 100,000 truckers, striking for a 22-per-cent pay rise, have organized so-called "secondary picketing" to block movement of goods from docks and firms not directly involved in the dispute.

In a highly-publicized parliamentary speech Tuesday night, Conservative leader Margaret Thatcher offered to help the government enact laws to curb union power, and her plea was heralded in the media as the most impressive performance of her parliamentary career.

Callaghan instead appealed to truckers to go back to work, but with no sign of an end to a dispute, he has little recourse than to put troops on the trucks.

Meanwhile, railway engineers reaffirmed Wednesday that they will stage a one-day strike today, their second this week.

Moonies 'Ready To Die'

NEW YORK (UPI) — New West magazine says followers of the Rev. Sun Myung Moon have been programmed to commit suicide in defiance of opposition to their cult, just as did more than 900 members of the Peoples Temple in Jonestown, Guyana.

The magazine quotes a former member of Moon's Unification Church — followers of which popularly are known as "Moonies" — as saying Moon teaches his followers that death by their own hands is preferable to "deprogramming" or life outside his church.

New West quotes former Moonie Virginia Mabry, 24, as saying she attended a lecture at the Moon House in San Francisco in which anatomy lessons were given instructing where to cut with a razor in the event any member was kidnapped by parents bent on deprogramming.

"The best thing would be to throw ourselves in front of the deprogrammer's car, because then he'd be charged with murder," she told New West. "Second, depending on how much time we had, we were told to slice either our wrist or our jugular vein. The jugular, they said, was quicker."

A $20B RETIREMENT FUND?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and his family, now embarked on a vacation that may become permanent exile from Iran, can comfort themselves with a fortune that one source estimates at more than $20 billion, The Washington Post reported today.

In a dispatch from Tehran, the newspaper said the exact size of the monarch's wealth is a closely guarded secret. But the source, identified as an Iranian economist, said the $1 billion figure previously reported was a "gross underestimate" and that the shah's assets probably exceed $20 billion.

The newspaper did not explain how its source arrived at the $20 billion figure. But it quoted various other sources as saying that the royal family's wealth derives from Iranian oil revenues, widespread business investments and even a drug-smuggling operation in which the shah's twin sister, Princess Ashraf, was reported to have been deeply involved.

The newspaper quoted one source, described as having knowledge of Iranian business and the royal family, as saying that "Iranian opium and hashish was leaving the country, and heroin and cocaine was coming in."

The main vehicle for the royal family's business interests is the Pahlavi Foundation, ostensibly a charity but in practice a profitable investment house, The Post said.

The Post said the foundation holdings include banks, hotels, casinos, industrial and mining ventures, agriculture, construction firms and trading companies.

Iran Still at Flashpoint

Times News Services

TEHRAN — Pro-shah troops clashed with thousands of anti-shah demonstrators in Ahwaz in Iran's southern oilfield district today and heavy casualties were reported on the day following the monarch's departure from the strife-torn country.

First reports said 24 people were killed and at least 100 wounded by gunfire.

There were no immediate details of how the shooting started.

The Tehran newspaper Ettelaat said the army opened fire in Ahwaz after tens of thousands of demonstrators had gathered in front of a mosque. The newspaper said there were hundreds of casualties.

An army spokesman in Tehran said that after morning prayers at the Ahwaz garrison groups of frenzied officers and soldiers ran through the city of 500,000 calling for demonstrations in support of the absent shah.

One serious clash developed when armed soldiers came upon a group of demonstrators trying to topple a statue of the shah in an Ahwaz square.

One Ahwaz resident, reached by telephone from Tehran, said: "There's so much shooting outside that I don't dare go near the windows."

The sudden outburst of military-led violence followed strong rumors that revellers who marched into the streets celebrating what they said was the end of the shah's 38-year rule could face a violent reaction from the military and police.

The capital itself, which was quiet after night-long revelry, showed no immediate signs that the backlash was a co-ordinated effort.

There were strong

199 Bodies Recovered In Earthquake Rubble

TEHRAN (AP) — The death toll in the Iranian earthquake rose to 199 today, rescue officials said, and the Tehran newspaper Ettelaat said the total may eventually top 1,000.

A spokesman for the Red Lion and Sun, Iran's Red Cross, said 199 bodies had been recovered from the rubble in the remote eastern villages of Bazanabad, Khorramabad and Ebrahimabad.

He said about 1,000 homes and other buildings were destroyed, that the villages had a combined population of 1,800, and that troops expected to dig out more bodies.

The spokesman said emergency supplies of food, clothing and tents have been sent from Mashhad to the village of Quae'n, in the centre of the quake area about 800 kilometres southeast of Tehran and 160 kilometres west of the border with Afghanistan.

Three C-130 transport planes were to fly from Tehran to Quae'n with 300 tents, 1,000 blankets, 300 lamps and 300 heaters, the spokesman said, and three doctors and five nurses were sent from a military garrison.

It was the second killer quake in eastern Iran in four months and was preceded by several non-fatal shocks in the last month.

USC Drive Comes Up Bit Short

The Unitarian Service Committee of Canada fund-raising drive in Victoria has come to an end so far as making donations locally is concerned. A final list of donors can be found today on page 14.

The campaign this year fell somewhat short of its goal with the total standing at $32,339, but it was still the second-highest amount ever raised in Victoria and the Victoria Times, on behalf of the USC, wishes to thank those who contributed to aid the thousands of deserving people in impoverished nations who will benefit from these funds.

While the Victoria campaign is officially over, the USC's need is always great and donations mailed to the USC at 56 Sparks St., Ottawa K1P 5B1 will be welcomed. Receipts for income tax purposes will be issued on request.

Times Appeals Cartoon Case

Victoria Times publisher Colin McCullough said today the newspaper will appeal the B.C. Supreme Court judgment Tuesday awarding damages to Municiapl Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zam in a libel action.

McCullough said the decision was taken after study of the judgment, which he called disappointing, and after conferring with the paper's legal advisers.

Vander Zalm says he is extremely pleased with the decision that awarded him $3,500 damages in his libel suit against the Times and cartoonist Bob Bierman. (See page 20 for Mr. Justice Craig Munroe's judgement).

The former human resources minister claimed: "It shows once and for all that the programs I introduced were effective and beneficial; not cruel and inhuman."

Bierman described the judgment as a defeat for all political cartoonists that will force them to tone down their pictorial comments in the future.

Vander Zalm sued the Times, Bierman, former Times publisher Stuart Underhill and editor Barbara McLintock, claiming he was libelled by an editorial cartoon that appeared in the newspaper last year.

The cartoon, which depicted the minister pulling wings off flies, portrayed

Ottawa Quashes Papers

QUEBEC (CP) — The federal government has refused to hand over state papers relating to Ottawa's actions during the 1970 October Crisis to a Quebec justice department investigator.

The decision was confirmed recently by a letter from Louis-Philippe Landry, federal assistant deputy minister of justice, to special Crown prosecutor Jean-Francois Duchaine, who has been working on a report on the crisis for the provincial justice department.

Last year, Duchaine requested a series of documents from the RCMP and a number of federal departments, noting that they were necessary to complete his investigation.

But in the letter, Landry replied that Ottawa was only willing to supply information on the kidnapping of former British diplomat James Cross, which touched off the crisis.

Duchaine filed a 1,400-page report on the October Crisis to Quebec Justice Minister Marc-Andre Bedard.

Wooing of Quebec 'Harmful to Canada'

OTTAWA (CP)— Many Canadians believe politicians are harming national unity by trying to woo Quebecers with the economic advantages of remaining in Confederation, a study released Tuesday by the Council for Canadian Unity says.

The council, which organizes Canada Week activities annually, reached this conclusion after interviewing what it describes as 500 opinion leaders across a country characterized by inter-provincial jealousies, timid nationalism and no national goals.

Since the November, 1976, election of the Parti Quebecois, the federal government has published a series of studies showing the economic disadvantages facing Quebecers living in an independent country. The Quebec government has countered with studies showing the opposite results.

Marie-Josee Drouin, an economist who supervised the study, found "it was like trying to pull teeth" to get most Canadians to discuss their views on national unity.

The study found that most Canadians, even in Quebec, are more pre-occupied with their regional economic problems and are willing to become richer at the expense of other provinces.

"The net effect of this is that they want a bigger piece of a pie that has ceased growing, regardless of whose share will be diminished by what they gain."

While most Canadians had different perceptions of the causes of national tensions, the residents of nine provinces ganged up to condemn Ontario for treating the rest of the country as second class.

"We are branch plants of Ontario; we've been on the periphery of power too long . . . we are tired of subsidizing Ontario's manufacturing industry."

The report says attitudes towards Ontario "were pervasively fierce," and general crabbiness dominated relations between regions and provinces.

All provinces except British Columbia viewed the Atlantic provinces as the worst treated in Confederation. British Columbia considered itself the hardest done by.

On language issues, the study found Canadians to be often ill-informed and ready to exaggerate problems.

In English-speaking Canada, many would complain about what they believed to be high costs in producing bilingual cereal boxes and Quebecers often cited an incident in Toronto at which baseball fans booed when the national anthem was sung in French.

Batt's Back

James Freeman Batt, also known as Sunshine Jim, is at it again . . . working at discoveries to benefit mankind. Now it's a disc-charged cleaning fluid.

'Laugh Item' No Giggle?

max
low

Knew I should have stuck to taking Mondays off.

But every now and then I get this guilt feeling that I'm not starting the week in an industrious fashion along with everyone else. So I come in and no one phones me all day because I'm not supposed to be here.

The only people looking for me are those who don't expect anyone to be here; those who don't expect anyone to listen. Like Sunshine Jim.

The last time we heard from James Freeman Batt was a couple of years ago when he waltzed into the newsroom with his latest invention: the Freeman Energy Disc and an assorted supply of plastic bottles of disc-charged cleaning fluids.

True to form, Jim breezes in this week, behaving as though no one ever told him Monday was different.

"It was a laugh item when it first came out," he says as I sit staring at the glittering gold four square-inch disc. That's all right, I tell him. He's quite safe this time as I don't laugh much on Mondays.

Now it's not that I mind sitting with James Freeman Batt discussing discoveries that will benefit mankind, even on a Monday. But what I can't face so early in the week is (having already gone through the breakfast routine and the cleaning up that goes with it) a pile of dirty dishes on my desk.

Would I kid you?

You see, Sunshine Jim discovered long ago that if one places a plastic bottle of ordinary tap or well water over the Freeman Energy Disc (no, the disc doesn't go into the water) and leaves it during the night, it will become a cleaning fluid that will clean just about anything — windows, records, teeth and dentures, aquariums, even baths and toilets.

In fact, Sunshine Jim Products Ltd. ("We're just a small company — my wife Rosanne and I," he says) marketed little bottles of the seemingly magic water labelled for different tasks but have since switched to selling just the energy discs so people can make up their own cleaners.

And Jim needed to get the point across about his latest find which he calls "Flour Power."

"Two ounces of flour mixed with a gallon of charged water makes an excellent cleaner for dishes," he claims. "Only trouble is, though, we haven't worked out a way yet of keeping the mixture as the flour goes bad after three or four days, so you must just make up enough for your immediate use."

So there was I on a Monday wishing I wasn't there, surrounded by Sunshine Jim, a container of charged water, a bag of flour and the Batts' greasy breakfast dishes — frying pan and all — scattered around my desk.

I won't deny that James Freeman Batt, true to his word, didn't whisk through those greasy dishes like a smiling housewife in a TV ad. But it's just the delightfully outrageous things he says along with it, without batting an eyelid, that get me.

For example the disc, which sells for $6.77, is completely natural, he says, with no solar, radiation nor magnetic powers yet defies science as to where it does get its power from. And it lasts up to 100 years or longer, he claims. (Presuming you'd need it longer, that is).

Two things Jim worries about are the government stopping him from operating because of the threat to the billion-dollar chemical industry, and the widespread unemployment his energy disc could cause if it takes off.

"And it will," he insists, "once people know about it."

He shakes his head in dismay and adds that after experimenting with pyramids for years before discs, he believes the hardest thing to be in life is an inventor because you're dealing with completely different things.

"We must be almost $10,000 in debt with this stupid thing," he says looking fondly at his energy disc. "I'm just getting to the point where I'm saying 'Hell, why should I be doing this for the world?' But it is for the world. For the millions out there concerned about pollution."

Do most people think he's mad, I ask Sunshine Jim.

"Of course, don't you? he says and then, before I can agree, he adds quickly: "That is, they do only until they try it."

Then they find, he says, that they have a cleaning product that is so pure it's not only biodegradable but consumable.

"And it's powerful, too," he says. "While most people use 40 gallons of water to clean their car, all you need is a quarter-of-a-gallon of charged water to make a big Oldsmobile sparkle."

Well, I don't have a big Oldsmobile Jim but I've been thinking: maybe to get more charged up for Mondays, I could put a Freeman Energy Disc under me on Sunday nights . . .

'Politicians pander to Proposition 13 mentality' — CUPE's Grace Hartman

Man, 92, Turns In Vandal Suspects

A 92-year-old Central Saanich man is credited with ending what Central Saanich police chief Bob Miles describes as an absolutely senseless window-smashing spree over the weekend.

Miles said Tuesday the quick action of Matthew Delamere, 902 Verdier, led to the arrest of three suspects and seizure of a slingshot and quantity of machine nuts used as ammunition.

Delamere was sitting in his living room about 11 p.m. Saturday when a nut came flying through a large plate glass window.

On checking outside he saw the taillights of a car going down the road, and immediately called police.

Miles said a police cruiser happened to be about half a mile away travelling in the same direction on Verdier looking for suspects in other window-smashing incidents earlier in the evening when the call came through.

After a short chase the officer stopped a van and arrested the trio, two aged 17, one 18.

"If he (Delamere) hadn't acted as quickly as he did, I doubt if we'd have caught them," Miles said. "It's an example of what we've been trying to get across to the public for years. When something happens, call us without delay."

The three have been charged with breaking windows in four other homes in Central Saanich, two homes in Saanich and two car windshields. They will appear in provincial court Feb 1.

"What concerns us is this is an absolutely senseless destruction of property," Miles said.

One of the suspects is the son of a professional person; another the son of a prominant Central Saanich businessman.

Miles said the spree caused more than $2,000 damage. Full restitution will be sought, he added.

Burrard Yarrow Bid Low

Burrard-Yarrow Ltd. of North Vancouver and Victoria was low bidder Tuesday for construction of two new jumbo-sized ferries for the B.C. Ferries Corp.

Charles Gallagher, corporation general manager, said the low bid was $57,860,000 for the two Cowichan Class vessels which will carry 360 cars and 1,500 passengers each.

The nearest competitor was Vancouver Shipyards Co. Ltd. with a bid of $62.8 million.

Gallagher said a management team will review the bids, and award a contract by the end of the month.

Boilermakers' Union spokesman Neil Hindle said he was delighted.

"I just hope they make a decision quickly so that we can get to work and help the unemployment problem."

Cash Plea In Minnie Campaign

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Cadboro Bay residents' fight against the Minnie Mountain development project has already involved them in a mini-mountain of legal costs but there may be a lot more to come.

The Cadboro Bay Residents' Association, which raised $7,700 in pledges from members to finance its recent successful court case, is now asking for almost as much again to continue the battle if and when the matter is appealed.

In a B.C. Supreme Court action the association succeeded in having the Minnie Mountain land-use contract bylaw quashed, thwarting plans by Broadmead Farms Ltd. for a multi-million-dollar residential development on the 70-acre property at Ten Mile Point.

But Broadmead has already indicated that the judgment probably will be appealed, and to prepare for that eventuality the residents' association has now launched another appeal for funds.

In a newsletter to members the group's executive states: "It is your board's opinion that we ought to defend any appeal as we are given to understand that our chances of success are reasonably good."

Unless the appeal is defended, "the Appeal Court would probably overturn the original decision by default."

But the letter points out that even with the $7,700 already raised the association still needs an estimated $1,100 to meet legal costs incurred to date.

On top of that the costs involved in defending an appeal are estimated at about $6,000.

Mr. Justice William Trainor quashed the Minnie Mountain bylaw for illegality, on grounds of Ald. David Paterson's disqualifying interest in the land-use contract.

(Paterson's employers, the legal firm Pearlman and Lindholm, at the time were providing legal services to Saanich and had previously had a solicitor-client relationship with Broadmead Farms).

The bylaw had been passed by a 5-4 margin but the court decision ruled that Paterson's vote was invalid, thus overturning the bylaw.

The Cadboro Bay association's letter says apart from the project itself being killed, the case stands as a landmark because the decision goes to to heart of council voting procedures.

"It means, as we understand it, that an alderman should not vote on any matter in which a fair-minded and reasonable outsider could think that there was a conflict of interest."

Copies of the written reasons for Trainor's Dec. 21 judgment have been received only within the last few days. Any notice of appeal must be filed within 45 days from the entry of the judgment on court records.

'People Before Property'

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

A national trade union leader said here Tuesday there is a need for broadly-based political reform in Canada in order to swing the emphasis away from property and material things and focus on people's rights.

Grace Hartman, president of the 250,000-member Canadian Union of Public Employees, made the statement in a speech to a small group of University of Victoria students.

She said it has been said the mark of a nation is how it treats its old and its sick.

If that is the case, the need for change in Canada is obvious, Hartman said, because of the actions of governments cutting back on hospital care, day-care and other social services.

She said it is time trade unions organized to fight such restrictions as well as attacks on their own rights by becoming more involved politically.

"We should work for the election of governments which reject the current social values," Hartman said.

She said many of those in power seem to feel the right of property is the primary right of the land. Organized labor believes the rights of people are the primary rights.

What is needed is a more co-operative society where the well-being of people is accorded the respect it deserves, she said.

"There will no longer be a place in the legislative chambers for the Trudeaus, the Lyons (Manitoba Premier Sterling Lyon) or the Bennetts."

Hartman said the current attack on public sector unions is not just a provincial government move but is orchestrated from Ottawa.

She said it is traditional for governments facing elections to use public service employees as whipping posts and blame them for the country's economic problems.

The root cause of the attacks, she said, is the clearly discernible swing to the right and the decision by politicians to pander to this "Proposition 13 mentality."

GVLRA IS 'PRO-PEOPLE, NOT ANTI-UNION' - SMITH

The chairman of the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association said today the employers' group is not anti-union or abrasive in its approach, but pro-people.

Oak Bay Mayor Brian Smith was countering a statement Tuesday from Greater Victoria school board chairman Carol Pickup who said the GVLRA is too negative in its approach to labor relations.

She said she favors pulling the school board out of the association unless it adopts a more positive approach.

Smith said today maybe Pickup will change her attitude about the GVLRA after she attends some of the its board meetings.

"I don't think she is too familiar with the GVLRA," Smith said.

"I certainly don't feel the GVLR is anti-anything. I think it is pro-people."

Pickup's remarks came after GVLRA manager Carl Anshelm accused five locals of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, bargaining through a joint committee, of stalling negotiations for a new contract.

He said he had applied for a mediator.

Smith said the move is not a confrontation step but simply an effort to get the collective bargaining machinery moving.

"We are not looking for a confrontation with the public sector employees, we are looking for a settlement," Smith said.

Both parties have accused one another of stalling.

The executive of CUPE local 388, representing city inside workers, was to decide today whether to apply for a mediator in its contract dispute with the city. The local is bargaining outside the Joint Negotiating Committee.

Anshelm said today he expects a mediator to be appointed shortly.

Smith said a mediator will be able to sort out what appear to be misunderstandings as to who is prepared to meet who and start the negotiations rolling.

Saanich Fights Easing

Saanich should formally oppose any attempts to ease the present subdivision restrictions in the Highlands area, council's planning committee recommended Tuesday night.

Aldermen instructed municipal planner Gil Laurenson to prepare a brief opposing the proposal to lift the 45-acre freeze covering the Highlands district and replace it with a 10-acre subdivision minimum.

That recommendation from the Capital Region Board's electoral services committee will be aired at a public hearing at the Juan de Fuca Recreation Centre Jan. 30.

Laurenson's draft brief will be presented for Saanich council approval at a special council meeting Jan. 29.

Laurenson told the committee he has already voiced his opposition at the regional board's technical services committee, made up of officials of the regional district and its various component municipalities.

He said the removal of the 45-acre freeze seems inappropriate at a time when Saanich is considering raising its rural-area subdivision minimum from five to 10 acres.

He warned any stimulation of subdivision activity in the Highlands would burden adjoining areas with extra costs for roads, fire protection and other services.

"Apart from that there is the over-all regional concern that an area such as the Highlands . . . should be developing in a haphazard way at this time, perhaps 20 or 30 years before it is needed at all," Laurenson said.

The area should remain inviolate, he added.

THE NOT-SO-LOWLY SPUD

hilda beastall

Potatoes should be elevated once more to the position they held in Europe when first introduced there several centuries ago.

The potato was native to South America, and it took the thrifty French to discover how easy it was to grow in their country and to devise ways of using it in daily meals so that it never became tiresome.

Today we are given nutrient values of many foods to guide our choices. We find one medium-size potato weighing 160 gms gives us 105 calories while 60 gms of hamburger load us with 182 calories, with 32 gms of fat in each 60 gms.

The potato gives only 0.1 gm of fat making it reasonable for most of us to add a knob of vegetable margarine to balance the protein, iron, potassium, and vitamins A, B, and C with a little necessary fat.

These valuable nutrients are said to be at highest level at time of lifting from the soil, lessening during storage. Does this account for the finest flavor also being evident in early fall when new crops come from garden or field?

Although loss of some nutrient values is inevitable in cooking potatoes there are ways to reduce the loss to a minimum.

Never soak potatoes in water either before scrubbing or peeling nor after they are prepared for cooking. When boiling potatoes use a minimum of boiling water, add a pinch of salt towards end of cooking period which is about 15 minutes. Use gentle boiling once the boiling point is reached.

Never throw out the cooking water from potatoes (nor from other vegetables); it has many nutrients, much flavor, and some thickening action in soup, sauce or gravy. If potato skins are left on, so much better will be the potato, and the potato water.

Baking potatoes has always been thought much more nutritious than any other method of cooking though boiling in the skins should be equal if the liquid is used for some further purpose.

The thin skin is fairly easy to remove, if this is desired, from both the baked and the boiled while hot, though a bit tiresome. If much pulp comes off with the peel, why not put it aside to use in a soup?

When boiling potatoes for occasional mashing, boil in the skins and put through a colander to remove the skins which are to be added to a later soup with the potato liquid. Keep these leftovers in either small glass jars covered, or in old cups or small basins.

Apart from traditional uses for potatoes evolved during the last century, with meat, many other ways appeal to people nowadays. The potato has a flavor of its own worthy of being developed.

Potato soup with only onion for flavoring is capable of being a complete meal. Try it soon with a side dish of carrots and fresh spinach or swiss chard.

POTATO SOUP

- 2 cups water (or potato water)
- 3 cups diced potato
- ¼ cup chopped onion OR
- 1 whole garlic clove
- 1 tbsp. fresh parsley OR
- 1 tsp. dried (or use chervil)

Cook vegetables briefly in boiling water until almost tender.

Thicken with:

- 1 cup cold water
- ½ cup skim milk powder
- 1 tbsp. wholewheat flour
- 1 tsp. salt
- 2 tbsp. soft margarine
- 1 tbsp. yeast powder (torula)

Add water gradually to flour, salt and milk powder in small bowl, mixing until smooth. Stir into hot potato mixture, bringing gradually back to boiling point. The whole garlic clove may be removed now if desired and discarded. It will leave a more subtle flavor than onions. After boiling for a minute, remove from heat, stir in margarine and yeast powder. Serve at once in warmed plates.

Sprinkle with paprika if desired. This recipe yields four servings.

Potato Scones or Potato Pancakes are another delicious meal. Ingredients can be the same for both but scones will have less liquid so that they are thicker to cook on a greased griddle, in a lightly greased thick frypan or skillet, or even on a greased cookie tray in a hot oven.

Have mashed potatoes left from a previous meal for saving time in preparation.

POTATO SCONES

- ¾ cup whole wheat flour
- ½ tsp. baking powder
- ¼ tsp. salt
- ½ cup skim milk powder
- 1 cup mashed potatoes
- 2 tbsp. softened vegetable margarine
- 1 egg
- ½ cup water (or potato water)

Mix dry ingredients in bowl; work in mashed potatoes and margarine. Beat egg in cup and add ½ cup of liquid. Add this liquid to potato dough. Mix briefly. Dough should be like a bread dough, soft yet rather dry on outside for the scones; softer for pancakes.

Pat with hands on floured paper to make 4 thick rounds. Place with lifter on cookie tray to bake at moderate 177° C. or put into a hot frypan or on a griddle. Both need 15 minute cooking, being turned once. Delicious served with cooked frozen green peas.
